GSI Strike Cuts Menus For 80,000 U.S. Workers

Union Says 95% Of Employes Out; Hiring of New Force Denounced

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

The strike in 42 Federal building cafeterias goes into a second day today, leaving 80,000 customers the prospect of deflated menus, paper plates and wooden utensiles.

"More than 95 per cent" of the 1500 or more workers walked off their jobs yesterday and joined picket lines, said Oliver T. Palmer, business agent for Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers, UPW-CIO.

According to J. C. Niehuss, personnel manager for Government Services, Inc., operators of the cafeterias, supervisory employes and newly hired workers were able to serve curtailed meals to 60 per cent of the normal customer volume.

Two Cafeterias Closed

Two cafeterias—those at the Labor Department and Supreme Court—were closed yesterday at the request of the agencies involved. Oscar L. Chapman, Undersecretary of the Interior, yesterday asked Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming to close the Interior Department cafeteria today.

A contract between GSI and the union expired at the end of 1947 with the parties deadlocked. The union has asked a 15-cent hourly wage increase. GSI refuses to talk about a new contract until the union files non-Communist affidavits under the Taft-Hartley Act. This GSI demand is a "smokescreen," the union claims, to cover GSI's "union-busting" activities.

Government workers who entered the cafeteria lines found this menu: Hot frankfurters, two vegetables, rolls, butter, some salads, doughnuts and beverages. Most cafeterias were able to serve ham and pot roast also, but these items—apparently prepared over the weekend—ran out early.

Lunch Bags in Evidence

Niehuss said the working force was a third of normal. He said about 300 new workers were hired over the weekend and that 200 more had been hired yesterday.

He refused to predict when full services would be resumed.

"The indications are," he said, "that many workers didn't report for work because they wanted to see what the next fellow would do. Now that they see they won't be alone. We expect they will be drifting back."

Last Friday, GSI gave a 6½-cent-

Finder of Plane Who Turned Down $5000 Gets Raise

A ranger at Mount Rainier (Wash.) National Park who turned down a $5000 reward for finding a wrecked airplane has been given a pay raise of $126 a year.

Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug announced yesterday the promotion for William J. Butler, assistant chief ranger at the park. It raised Butler's salary from $3898 to $4024.

A Marine transport plane crashed on Mount Rainier December 10, 1946. Butler found it last July 4.

Krug said, in a letter to the park employe who broke a rib in a fall during the search:

"Your extraordinary act in rejecting a large monety reward, which I understand, was actually placed in your hands by the parents of Marines who died in the crash, is one which impresses me as an outstanding illustration of the high caliber of the men who find their way into the public service."

Newton B. Drury, Park Service director, said Butler found the wreckage on one of his days off duty, and therefore was legally entitled to accept the award. Park service employes are not allowed to accept awards for work done in line of duty.

U. S. Agrees To Increased Greek Forces

Premier Announces Army, Guard Hikes Of 60,000 Soldiers

Athens, Jan. 5 (AP).—Premier Sophoulis announced tonight the United States had agreed to increases in the size of the Greek army and national guard.

Twelve thousand men will be added to the army. The strength of the guard will be fixed at 100 battalions, approximately 50,000 men.

Meanwhile, dispatches said Greek commandos fought Communist-led guerillas virtually on the Albanian border, north and west of Konitsa.

Arms Supply Studied

The Premier said the United States also is considering the question of supplying machine guns and mountain artillery for Greek soldiers who have complained their weapons are not suitable.

The decisions, the announcement said, constitute a prompt reply to the help given the guerillas from the outside. Athens has charged repeatedly that Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania have supplied and supported the leftists.

Strengthening of the national guard was described as a move to free regulars for attacks against the "enemies of Greece." It also was agreed a closer relationship would be effected immediately between the American Aid Mission and the army.

Observer Teams Due Soon

One source said the United Nations special commission on the Balkans will establish permanent observer teams along the Greek frontier within two weeks.

A military echelon which spent five days observing the battle for Konitsa was convinced the guerillas were supplied from Albania, the source said.

Athens heard that fresh guerillas were moving across the border southwest of Konitsa. There was speculation that the guerillas, beaten off at Konitsa, might launch a new offensive from Albania along the northwestern Greek coast.

In the fighting to expand the Konitsa perimeter, Athens forces seized the key rebel defense position on Lykomoro Height only a mile from the Albanian border front advices said. Forty-five guerillas were killed there.

Farther westward in the Delvinakion region a rebel force of 1500 to 2000 men, withdrawing northward, was reported to have abducted 15 girls when it passed through Visani.

U. S. Authorizes Ammunition's Release to Greeks

By the United Press

The United States has given Britain blanket authority to transfer to the hard-pressed Greek army any lend-lease military equipment held by British forces in Greece, the State Department disclosed last night.

That move to bolster the Greek government in its bloody civil war against Communist guerilla forces was revealed in a routine departmental announcement of surplus military equipment sales.

The department disclosed that the British already have available for transfer almost 1,500,000 rounds of antiaircraft and small-arms ammunition which, presumably, will be turned over to the Greek army without delay.

The British also have been authorized, the department said, to transfer 2,100,000 rounds of United States lend-lease ½-inch ammunition to Turkey.

Navy Places Its Top Strategist in Command of Area

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Navy yesterday ordered its top startegist to take command of American naval forces in the Mediterranean as two shiploads of fully equipped Marines sailed for the area.

Vice Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations, will relieve Vice Admiral B H. Bieri in the Mediterranean post during the first week in February, the announcement said.

The assignment coincided with the departure of an assault transport and an assault cargo ship from Morehead City, N. C., carrying about 1000 Marines of the Second Division, equipped with tanks, field guns, trucks, jeeps and flame throwers.

Many of the Leathernecks—specialists in amphibious warfare—were veterans of Guadalcanal and Tarawa. The sailing was a day ahead of schedule.

Shipment of tanks and other full field equipment, along with the Leatherneck contingent, was reported by an Associated Press reporter who watched the vessels loaded.

Earlier, Marine Corps officials here had indicated that tanks, trucks and field guns would not go with them. The sea soldiers are being assigned to major warships of the Mediterranean squadron—the big aircraft carrier Midway and the light cruisers, Portsmouth, Providence and Little Rock.

The ships now—and normally—are in Italian and Greek ports. Arrival of the Leathernecks is expected to have its effect on the Recognition 'Balk' Thought Aim of Navy

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The Navy's dispatch of ships, men and landing craft to the Mediterranean bore all the earmarks yesterday of an attempt by American diplomacy to stave off formal Soviet and satellite recognition of the new rebel "government" in northern Greece.

It has not yet been decided when, where or whether this little force is to be used, as far as could be learned yesterday. Specifically, there has been no definite decision on what to do if the rebels get formal recognition from the Communist countries north of the Greek frontier.

So far there have been informal expressions of satellite support for the rebel, "government," but nothing more. An emergency would arise only if Russia, or any of her satellites, should give formal recognition, which would amount to an act of war against Greece.

The Navy's token demonstration was regarded as a reminder to the Russians and their friends that the United States could reach the Mediterranean with armed power if necessary, just as it reached far more distant areas with real instead of token fleets during the war.

Secretary Marshall returned to his desk at the State Department yesterday after a holiday in North Carolina. Alternative courses of action had been prepared by his subordinates, who always have to be ready with recommendations in case of future trouble.

The dispatch of the Navy's token force was ordered only after consultation with the State Department, and perhaps at the State

Market Trading Records Delivered For Pauley Called 'Unsatisfactory'

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Records of the market operations of Edwin W. Pauley, special assistant to Secretary of the Army Royall, and Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, White House physician, were subpenaed from their two brokerage houses yesterday.

Both officials will be called this week before the Senate Appropriations Committee to give further details of their transactions, Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of the investigating subcommittee, said last night.

Records furnished by Pauley's attorney and office manager Saturday night are unsatisfactory, Ferguson said last night.

Ferguson also complained that Graham's broker, Bache & Co., was not furnishing all the information about his dealings. A subpena was served on Sarah B. Herschel, Washington representative for Bache & Co., yesterday by Senate Sergeant-at Arms Edward F. McGinnis. Senate employes then took all records available of Graham's accounts to the committee's office.

Two Officials Questioned

Yesterday the subcommittee spent a full afternoon questioning two State Department officials, reported last week as "large traders" in commodities.

They are Paul F. McGuire, 406 N. Thomas st., Arlington, deputy chief of the Office of Financial and Development Policy, and John C. Montgomery of the International Resources Division.

The hearings, held in secret, will be resumed today, Ferguson said. Until "certain information" necessary to a "fair and sensible open hearing" is developed, Ferguson said, the hearings will be closed.

Ferguson's charge that the records furnished by Bache & Co., about Graham's account were not complete, led to rumors that Graham had been dealing in other commodities than wheat.

Just Copies of Parts

"The broker just gave us photographic copies of parts of the records," Ferguson said. He added that Bache & Co. has been asked for all supporting data, such as correspondence, orders to buy and sell, etc.

Chiefly, the committee wants to know how accurate Graham was when he told reporters last week that he "lost his socks" in the market.

"We're trying to get things together in a hurry, so we can be ready to proceed with the questioning of both Pauley and Graham when Stassen is here Thursday," Ferguson said last night. Harold E. Stassen, candidate for the Republican nomination for president, first brought Pauley's name into the investigation the day after the Senate Appropriation Committee asked Army Secretary Royall for a statement of market operations by his aides.

The committee is also seeking to learn the truth of a disagreement between Graham and his

Witness Says Empire Owner Knew of Crack

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Thirty hours before the Empire Building collapsed, its owner was told that a supporting column was cracked, a witness testified yesterday.

The witness, Ben H. Fields, manager of the City Finance Co., street floor occupants of the collapsed area, told the special five-man investigating board that the day before the disaster he spotted a crack running diagonally across a wall-bearing pier between two openings.

Fields said he found the crack while checking the firm's offices on the corner of 9th st and New York ave. nw. on December 15. Workers had complained that water had seeped through a ceiling and spotted desks, floors and counters during the previous night.

The loan firm official then tried to contact the building janitor, Charles Brown. When he could not locate him, he telephoned a message to Nick Papanicolas, building owner. Papanicolas was out, but came over to inspect the premises about 5 p. m., Fields testified.

By this time, the "slight crack in the back of the column" had "progressed" and "showed up around the corner" of the column "pretty close to the ceiling," Fields said.

Papanicolas promised then to "see that things were taken care of," Fields reported, but on December 16, the night of the collapse, the "crack started getting wider."

After the hearing, Papanicolas denied the statement made by Fields and declared that his inspection showed "no crack whatsoever." He said he had informed

Schuman's Tax Plan Adopted To Stabilize French Economy

Paris, Jan. 5 (AP).—The National Assembly adopted tonight Premier Schuman's tax measure aimed at achieving French financial stability—a goal the nation must realize to reap full benefits under the Marshall Plan.

Adoption was by a vote of 315 to 268 after Schuman pleaded with the opposition to let him work for French recovery in peace.

The action amounted to a vote of confidence, Schuman's second big victory since he assumed office. This latest triumph came less than a month after his coalition government fought off Communist attempts to tie up France with a general strike.

Opposing him this time were the Communists, the Peasant (farm bloc) and the De Gaullists. Some moderates abstained. The opposition sought five different times to tack amendments on the tax measure. Each time they failed, and each vote amounted to an expression of confidence in Schuman.

The government's majority was never less than 33 votes on each occasion.

The extraordinary tax proposal is designed to mop up 125,000,000,000 francs (about $1,030,000,000) of excess purchasing power to pay for reconstruction and reequipment expenses. A government spokesman said the bill was a pillar of the fundamental economic policy of the government.

It was offered on a "take it or leave it" basis, and replaced a more drastic measure which had been torn to shreds by the Assembly.

It is aimed at farmers, businessmen and the liberal professions, such as doctors and lawyers, who already pay a tax on profits, and persons in the upper income brackets.

All can escape its provisions by subscribing to a special bond issue for an amount equivalent to what they would have to pay under the tax bill.

The disapproved amendments were designed to free many artisans, farmers and persons with war-damaged property from the tax. The votes were successively 308 for to 272 against, 306 to 273, 308 to 271, 308 to 269 and 307 to 274.

Supporters hoped the measure would curtail inflation.

Schuman appeared assured of social and political tranquillity for a month or so. He will need it to put France's economic house in order before start of the Marshall Plan and before General De Gaulle speeds up his political campaign which he hopes will lead to new general elections and a premiership for him.

Future Amounts Left to Congress After 6.8 Billion Request to Start

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The 17-billion-dollar "target" total for four years of Marshall Plan aid to western Europe yesterday was erased from the Administration's European recovery bill.

In an exchange of letters with Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg, the State Department with President Truman's approval agreed to accept a blanket four-year aid authorization, without any fixed total.

Vandenberg sponsored the new "generalized" four-year authority. He told reporters it leaves unchanged the initial $6,800,000,000 asked for the first 15 months of the program, and lets Congress determine the balance in annual appropriations.

Program Seen Strengthened

Far from impairing Marshall Plan objectives, Vandenberg said omission of any over-all estimate "immeasurably strengthens" the program by recognizing the "reality" that one Congress cannot commit another.

The Vandenberg-State Department exchange cleared the stage for opening of Senate Marshall Plan hearings Thursday, with Secretary of State George C. Marshall called as the first witness.

The last session of the campaign-minded Eightieth Congress meanwhile will get under way at noon today, with a routine drop of the gavel.

Actual business of the session will begin after President Truman personally delivers his State of the Union message to a joint meeting of the two Houses at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow.

GOP Program Discussed

The Senate Republican Steering Committee, headed by Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, conferred for two hours yesterday on a GOP legislative program to counter the President's own, but deferred major policy conclusions pending talks with House leaders.

These limited decisions were reached, however:

1. The Senate will call up and attempt to act this month on the St. Lawrence Seaway authority, a House-passed bill implementing the "Voice of America" program and House-approved Civil Service retirement legislation.

2. The Senate Banking Committee will hear arguments for and against limited rationing and price controls urged by the President in addition to holding hearings on proposals more acceptable to the GOP: Extended rent controls and tightened bank credit.

May Defer Budget Action

3. The Senate GOP leadership will press for a four to six weeks' postponement of legislative budget recommendations, setting Congress' own ceiling on spending. Under present law, Congress is required to set its budget goals by February 15. The congressional joint economic report, due February 1, would likewise be moved back a month to six weeks.

Senate Republican steersmen deferred any conclusions on tax cuts pending clarification of the budget picture, but not so Representative Harold Knutson (R., Minn.).

Knutson, author of a bill to cut taxes $5,600,000, predicted his own bill will pass the House this month "as is." House leaders had forecast only that a tax cut in some form will pass the House this month, failing to specify the Knutson bill.

President Truman, who vetoed the last two Knutson bills, will have something to say on the subject tomorrow. He is expected to once again oppose any big general tax slash but leave the door open for some low bracket tax relief later on if the country's fiscal condition permits.

In bowing to Vandenberg's wishes that the bill not specify the over-all four-year cost of the Marshall Plan, but let Congress do it on a year-to-year appropriation basis, Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett wrote Vandenberg:

"The Department of State has consulted the President and the Executive agencies represented on the Interdepartmental Committee, as well as those agencies having a

Murphy Trial Charges Cut From 13 to 9

Fire Chief Wins Point In Limiting Case to Time Served in Office

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Trial of Fire Chief Clement Murphy on charges of demoralizing his department yesterday was limited to his service as chief.

That ruling, reducing the counts in the charges against Murphy from 13 to 9, gave him a major victory in his trial before the civilian board appointed by the District Commissioners.

In dismissing the counts involving alleged actions before Murphy became department head on March 1, 1946, the board declared it had no direct precedent or other course of action under the charges "as drawn."

The charges, prepared by Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher, appointed by the Commissioners, cite Murphy for inefficiency and unfitness "in his capacity as chief engineer," but specified four instances occurring before he became chief.

Yesterday's trial board session at the Municipal Center, second in the proceedings, adjourned until 10 a. m. Thursday after board chairman Austin B. Canfield read a 4½-page ruling dismissing the first four counts of the specifications.

Two of them involved charges that in June, 1945, Murphy ordered subordinates to paint his home; one alleged use of abusive language, and the fourth declared Murphy caused a fireman to be listed as present when he was absent from work.

Of the nine charges remaining five are for abusive language; one for disorderly conduct; another alleges intoxication on duty at a fire; one charges violation of a department record, and a final broad charge states that he demoralized the department by rotation of personnel.

It was the second victory for Murphy in the trial board proceeding thus far. The board prev-

15 Still Missing In Palestine Bombings

Ruins Are Searched For Any Who May Be Alive, Trapped

Jerusalem, Jan. 5 (AP).—Rescue squads delved into the bomb-strewn debris of a Jerusalem hotel and a Jaffa square tonight in an attempt to reach any persons still alive and trapped in the wreckage.

The two bombings, aimed at meeting places of Arab leaders, were known to have taken 23 lives. The toll may reach 38. Police said the bombings were carried out by Jews.

In Jerusalem British army sappers working amid the remains of the half-destroyed Semiramis Hotel were guided for six hours by the screams of those buried alive. At least four others were brought out alive. Five bodies were found. Fifteen still were missing. One rescued woman had been crying for help for four hours.

A spokesman for Hagana, the Jewish militia, said the hotel was attacked because it was an important meeting place of Arab gangs, where arms were distributed to villages in the Jerusalem area."

Secreted in Mosque

"Unfortunately, we cannot hit at the Arab band's (main) headquarters as it is secreted in a mosque," he added.

In Jaffa's clock square rescuers counted four more Arab dead today, bringing the toll from yesterday's bombing to 18 Arabs killed and almost 100 injured.

Main target was a building housing the Arab National Committee. The blast wrecked the building and damaged Barclay's Bank, a police station and 15 shops.

Hagana announced another large-scale Jewish attack tonight—the dynamiting of three houses in villages around Safad, north of the Sea of Galilee. Eight Arabs were killed in one house, five in another and one in the third, Hagana said.

Arab volunteer fighters from Syria and Lebanon are reputed to enter Palestine in that region.

Lane Sees Truman, Asking 50 Millions for Md. Highways

Governor Lane of Maryland, accompanied by a score of other State officials, yesterday asked President Truman and Federal Works Administrator Fleming for a special 50-million-dollar Federal appropriation to help improve Maryland roads leading into Washington.

The President was described by Governor Lane as "very much interested in the whole business," after the group had seen him. General Fleming, who accompanied the Maryland legislators and officials to the White House, said later he agreed that Maryland has a "peculiar problem" in financing its roads near the Capital.

The proposal, which will be given "study and sympathetic consideration," according to General Fleming, would involve an annual appropriation of three million dollars, to be matched by the State, in addition to the "immediate" 50 million dollar amount requested.

In a statement before the two conferences, Governor Lane said the special fund "seems logical and equitable" to help finance an estimated $118,270,000 required for improvement of hig..ways "directly related to the service and benefit of the District of Columbia."

Referendum Held Valid

Legality of New School Board In Arlington Is Sustained

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Legality of Arlington County's newly elected school board was upheld yesterday by Circuit Judge J. Garland Jefferson.

In a six-page opinion mailed to court officials and attorneys for both sides, Judge Jefferson ruled constitutional the law under which the county was permitted to conduct a referendum to determine whether the school board should be elected or appointed.

Validity of the referendum law was contested last month by members of the old board, who announced their intention to remain in office until the question was settled.

Spokesmen for the old board did not indicate immediately whether they planned to appeal the decision. Harry W. Porter, who filed the suit challenging validity of the new board, said he had not had a chance to study Judge Jefferson's ruling and would not make a decision until he does so.

"If, after studying the opinion, I find there would be any merit in an appeal, I will carry the case further," Porter said.

direct interest or responsibility in this matter and I am glad to report that we are in agreement with the suggestion you make.

"It appears to conform to the basic principles on which the legislation is requested.

"This Department will, therefore, take the necessary steps prior to appearance before the committees of Congress to change the section under discussion in conformity with the proposal made in your letter of December 31."

Four Reasons for Change

In his letter to Lovett, Vandenberg gave these four reasons for making the change:

"(1) It is common practice for Congress to make authorizations in the proposed (general) language when the obligations are continuing and particularly when they reach from one Congress into another.

"(2) By proposing to limit the actual appropriations to one year, the bill correctly concedes that A four-year authorization is equal- one Congress cannot bind another. ly futile, in specific amount. It does not even possess the virtue of a 'ceiling' because any future Congress which might wish to exceed the present 'ceiling' will be just as ready to increase the 'ceiling' as it will be to appropriate the funds. The effective test each year is the Congressional appropriation—and there is no other. Therefore a general, continuing authorization serves every practical purpose from any viewpoint. It just as definitely recognizes a contemplated continuity as if expressed in figures.

"3. But to express this principle in figures (namely, 17 billion dollars) in the legislation itself may invite a specific reliance abroad which is impossible under our constitutional procedure. Furthermore, it can only be an educated guess of highly doubtful validity when we thus attempt to assess events for the next four years at home or abroad, and when the entire ERP enterprise is at the mercy of good or bad contingencies.

"4. The Committee on Foreign Relations can and should refer, in its report, to the historic basis of the negotiations upon which ERP is based. It can and should identify the final estimates of which it takes judicial notice when it acts. But I draw a sharp distinction between these elements of a working prospectus and the statutory identification of an actual figure to which the committee would have to give exhaustive study before it could give it legislative sanction."

Truman Studying New Tax Proposal

By The Associated Press

One of President Truman's top consultants said tonight the Chief Executive is weighing a proposal to recommend higher taxes on corporation profits to allow relief in low personal income brackets.

The plan, this White House adviser asserted, would be designed to offset Republican tax cutting demands by permitting relief for the smallest taxpayers without reducing overall tax revenues.

This official, who declined to allow use of his name, said President Truman was firmly opposed to any across-the-board general tax reductions and will fight any attempt to reduce total yields below present levels.

brokers. Graham said he didn't even know Bache & Co. had invested his money in commodities until October 7, two days after President Truman had denounced commodity speculators as "plain gamblers."

When he found he was in the market for 50,000 bushels of wheat, the President's physician said, he ordered his holdings sold at once.

Graham's statement drew a counter-statement from Bache & Co. that it had acted "at all times" on the physician's instructions, and that he was kept informed on all trading operations.

Meantime, complaints started piling up from persons named as speculators or big traders.

The Commerce Department announced that Leroy H. Mantell, 2710 S. Veitch st., Arlington, Va., an economic analyst, was incorrectly reported as a speculator by the Senate Appropriations Committee last week.

Not A Speculator

Mantell's name was on a list of Commerce Department employes who had traded in commodities. However, the department said, Mantell's operations consisted only of the cash purchase of flour for resale—and that he had not been a speculator or dealer on any commodity exchange.

The Senate committee, a Commerce Department spokesman pointed out, asked for the names of any employe who had "purchased, sold or dealt in any commodities."

Walter F. Roberts, Nebraska State railway commissioner, complained to Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) against being listed as a trader in wheat futures. Roberts was listed last week by the Agriculture Department as both "long" and "short" 5000 bushels of wheat on September 20.

Roberts complained that he hadn't ever bought or sold any wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade. He said that until June 26 he was in the market "to offset corn sold by me early in the year." Roberts charged the Government's lists "appear to be merely an attempt to garble the facts for political purposes."

"It is time somebody investigated the investigators," he wrote.

There is nothing illegal about trading in commodities, although many Government departments have office regulations forbidding it. The present furore dates from several attacks on speculation by President Truman during the autumn. Mr. Truman held speculation as partly responsible for driving grain prices up.

While the Senate investigators were studying the records of Pauley and Graham, Chairman August H. Andresen (R., Minn.) of a special House committee probing speculation, was off on a sleuthing expedition.

Andresen left Washington for "three or four days" without revealing his destination yesterday. As he left Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) demanded that Andresen disclose the source of information which Andresen said, revealed that 200 Federal employes in Chicago had formed a pool to speculate in grain.

Lucas termed this a "grave charge" which "put every Federal employe in Chicago under a cloud."

At the Agriculture Department it was announced a new list of traders in wheat will be released early tomorrow.

School Board Status Upheld

resulted from a hearing of the old school board's suit last Monday, overruled the contention of the plaintiffs that the Virginia law providing a referendum to determine whether the board should be elected or appointed was unconstitutional.

Members of the old board charged that the measure was "arbitrary, and not reasonable and appropriate," on the ground that it was a "special" law which could be applied only to Arlington and no other county."

In his opinion, Judge Jefferson conceded that the referendum law might be considered illegal "if it had to stand by itself." But, he added, "I am of the opinion it has to be considered in association with the Act of 1930, which it amended, and therefore is constitutional."

The 1930 act was the law which authorized the county to set up its present form of government.

The decision suspended, temporarily at least, a deadlock under which the county has had two school boards. In taking the case under advisement last week, Judge Jefferson ruled that officials of both units would have to sign authorizations for expenditures in order to be certain that the documents would be legal pending settlement of the dispute.

Opinion was about evenly divided among Arlington attorneys as to what would be the status of the two school boards in the event the decision is appealed. One group contended that the present ruling would be in effect pending a hearing on the appeal, while others expressed the belief that both boards would have to remain in office until the matter is finally settled.

Meanwhile, the court's ruling was commended last night by the Citizens' Committee for School Improvement, which fought vigorously for an elected school board, and then supported the five candidates who ultimately were elected.

In a formal statement, Chairman Alden Lillywhite said the committee was "highly pleased" with the decision, and expressed the hope that members of the old board would not appeal the ruling so that the new elected board "can move forward without further delay in putting in effect the improvements so urgently needed in Arlington schools."

Department's request. There was no evidence yesterday, however, of any decision to land marines in Greece or to take further action at the present time.

As usual on the occasion of Navy demonstrations, State Department officials declined to comment. The customary tactic in such situations is to pretend that the operation is routine, or to find some convenient pretext for the demonstration, and to let foreign countries draw their own conclusions.

It was recalled here that the battleship Missouri was sent to Istanbul last winter with the body of the Turkish Ambassador. This was represented as a courtesy visit, but it provoked a quick and angry response in the Soviet press, and Soviet pressure on Turkey eased almost immediately.

local population, torn between Communist and anti-Communist agitation.

Normally the Marine guard aboard carriers and cruisers has only light weapons. There is little room for heavier field equipment nor the landing boats or equipment designed to handle tanks and cannon.

Last night the Navy director of public information confirmed the fact that such fighting equipment went along with the Marines. He said it had not yet been decided whether the USS Montague and USS Bexar, which are transporting them to the Mediterranean, will remain with their landing boats to handle the tanks and other heavy weapons.

It would be possible to put them aboard the carriers and cruisers and handle them with makeshift equipment, or use other vessels now in the Mediterranean.

Actually Based in U. S.

American warships now there actually are based in the United States. Fuel and other supplies, as well as emergency repairs are provided by accompanying tankers, store and repair ships.

There are no definite plans as yet for the Marines to hold any landing exercises, officials said, though such amphibious training is expected to be conducted by the contingent.

Dispatch of the Leathernecks and the probable staging of landing exercises is regarded here as a demonstration to back up the Communist-beset governments of Italy and Greece.

The force of Marines actually involved, is of course, very small, as armies go. But officials evidently feel it will be regarded as token of American power—an indication that the United States is determined to prevent communism from taking over these two countries.

Scheduled for Some Time

Admiral Sherman—who probably will remain here until late this month conferring with State Department and Navy chiefs—has been slated to relieve Admiral Bieri for some time. Observers, however, saw some significance in timing the announcement of his appointment to coincide with the sailing of the Marines.

It, too, will have its effect on political leaders in Greece, Italy, the Balkans and the Kremlin.

Sherman was planning officer for Admiral Nimitz during the war and has held the key "operations" post in the Navy Department the past two years.

No Successor Announced

No successor has been announced for Sherman, nor was Bieri's new assignment revealed.

No reason was given by naval officials at Morehead City, N. C., for dispatching the two transports a day ahead of schedule. Officials here, however, said that sailing orders had contained some leeway, and that loading operations had been speeded up to catch the afternoon tide.

Officials at Camp LeJeune, N. C., said the Leathernecks carried blue uniforms as well as battle dress. Most of the remainder of the Second Division will conduct winter maneuvers in the Caribbean beginning February 15. They will last about six weeks.

Trygve Lie to Inspect '48 U. N. Meeting Places

Lake Success, Jan. 5 (AP).—Secretary-General Trygve Lie will leave for Europe Friday to inspect nominated sites for the United Nations' General Assembly of 1948.

SPECIAL NOTICE

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank of Washington, D. C., for the election of directors and such other business as may properly come before the meeting will be held at the banking house Tuesday, January 13, 1948, at 10 o'clock a. m. Books for the transfer of stock will be closed from December 26, 1947, to January 14, 1948.

an-hour raise to all employes who would stay on the job.

Union President Richard A. Bancroft, however, predicted the strike would "cripple" the cafeterias. He and Palmer denounced GCI's policy of bringing in new workers. They declared "many" of the new employes had come to the union for clarification of the strike issues and then had refused to work in the struck cafeterias.

Lunch bags from home were in evidence at all the cafeterias checked yesterday. Most of the customers bought coffee or milk only.

Soup Kitchen Set Up

The strikers—who, the union estimates, took home an average of $21.90 a week in their jobs—were fed at three union-sponsored soup kitchens. Spaghetti, hamburgers, coffee and doughnuts were served at the Shiloh Baptist Church, 1500 9th st. nw.; Temple Church of Christ and God, 6th and H sts. sw., and at union headquarters, 1015 M st. nw.

Picket lines appeared at all the cafeterias except at the two officially closed and at the National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md., and at Suitland, Md. These last were not picketed, Palmer said, because they are "out of the way," in places where picketing would have "no effect."

Cafeterias at Labor Department, Interior Department and the Supreme Court were also closed during last year's strike.

Restored Service Promised

Explaining Interior's request for the shutdown, Chapman said: "We just don't want pickets around the building and we don't want any of our people involved in the situation."

GSI President U. S. Grant 3d joined Niehuss in promising "rapid restoration of service . . . on the basis of the large number of employes who have refused to join the walkout and the rapid rate of hiring replacements."

Niehuss said that 14 employes at one cafeteria asked to sign notarized resignations from the union, while in other cases nonstriking employes persuaded pickets to return to work.

At a half dozen cafeterias, managers reported an average customer volume of less than 50 per cent, with menus cut by about 60 per cent.

3 French Girls, With U. S. Blessing, Rush to Fiances

Philadelphia, Jan. 5 (AP).—Three French girls headed North, South and West tonight to meet the men they plan to marry after immigration authorities gave them 90 days in which to do it.

The three, Felicia Dunas, 25; Fernande David, 23, and Anna Stein Goch, 38, ran into difficulties last Friday when their plane landed two days after the expiration of rules providing for quota-free entry of prospective brides.

Miss Dunas was to join Roy Morrison in Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Goch was off for Providence, R. I., to meet Frank J. Makara of Fall River, Mass., and Miss David will fly to Kansas City, where Harold Skaggs of San Francisco will be waiting.

Bomb Ruins Are Searched

from orange groves near the Jaffa-Tel Aviv border. A British army sergeant was shot and killed in Haifa. The unofficial death toll in Palestine since the United Nations voted for partition on November 29 climbed to 579.

Sporadic gunfire echoed from both the old walled city and the modern sections of Jerusalem for hours after the blast in the hotel.

The 1500 Jews inside the walled city still were besieged by Arabs.

Explaining that armed Arabs were occupying the gates to that ancient section, a Jewish spokesman said:

"Even the British army is showing identity papers to Arab guards and submitting to the authority of the Arab Higher Committee. The British have abdicated their authority to the Arab Higher Committee, setting a very bad precedent."

A British spokesman replied that if soldiers are showing their papers to Arabs "it is without our knowledge and it will be stopped in as far as possible."

Shertok, Enroute, Seeks Surplus Arms of U. S.

Copyright, 1948, N. Y. Herald Tribune

Tel Aviv, Jan. 5 (NYHT).—Moshe Shertok, probable foreign minister of the new Jewish state, left New York by plane today with a plan to ask the United States for surplus arms on some kind of lend-lease arrangement so Jews can enforce partition of Palestine.

Shertok was reported to be ready to commit Jews alone to make the United Nations partition decision effective. But there were two important provisos.

He said he expected to discuss arms and other matters both at Washington and at Lake Success.

Soviet Block Spurns U.N. Little Assembly

'Conditions' Issue

16 Nations May Meet Again on Aid

London, Jan. 5 (AP).—Britain and France are considering calling a new meeting of the 16 nations which drafted the Paris report to Secretary Marshall on the European recovery program, a British spokesman said today.

Some government sources said the French wanted to hold the meeting in Paris some time this month. They said the conference would have this threefold task:

1. To exchange views on the thorny issue of conditions which may be imposed on countries receiving American aid.

2. To consider the work of technical committees set up in the French capital last September.

3. To debate new problems of practical economic cooperation among the 16 countries concerned.

One informant said Herve Alphand, French financial expert, was pressing for a "united front" of aid recipients to limit American powers in administering the program.

This informant said that while "conditional aid" might not worry the British, it could upset delicate political balances in countries like France and Italy, where the Communists are a potent political force.

The British were said to regard a meeting of the nations this month as "somewhat early," since some technical committees have meetings still pending for the next few weeks.

There also was some opposition to reconvening the 16 nations before the United States Congress acts on the Marshall Plan.

44 of 57 Members Are Represented By Delegates

Lake Success, Jan. 5 (AP).—The Soviet bloc in the United Nations boycotted the first meeting today of the new and experimental "Little Assembly" sponsored by Secretary of State Marshall as a means of taking some of the workload off the regular Assembly.

Forty-four nations of the U. N. membership of 57 sent delegates to the opening session of the year-round sittings. The Soviet group—Russia, the Ukraine, White Russia, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Yugoslavia—kept its pledge not to attend.

Seven nations were absent without explanation. They were El Salvador, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Honduras, Lebanon, Paraguay and the Yemen. Dr. Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico, was elected chairman.

There was a flare-up when Sir Carl Berendsen of New Zealand, strongly opposed suggestions that the group recess until February 2 to study ideas on the veto issue. The delegates finally decided to meet again Friday at 11 a. m.

Warren R. Austin, chief United States delegate, invited the missing Russian group to join the other delegates.

"The United States did not and does not regard the interim committee (the official U. N. name of the "Little Assembly") as a body which in any way infringes upon the prerogatives of the Security Council," he said. "It is our hope that, in its work, the interim committee will demonstrate that fact to the states which on that account have chosen not to fill their seats here today. It is our hope that these states will soon join us in their committee."

Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Soviet deputy foreign minister, last fall called the Little Assembly "illegal" and a violation of the U. N. charter.

'Street Traders' Register for British Labor

London, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—Thousands of peddlers, shoeshine boys, newsboys and sidewalk photographers lined up at government labor exchanges today to register under Britain's first peacetime labor draft.

They may now be "directed" into more essential jobs. The country needs 500,000 workers to fill essential jobs and the labor conscription law was passed to fill them. The "street traders," of whom there are about 20,000, have until Saturday to finish registering. Any who fail to do so are subject to fines up to $2000 and imprisonment up to two years.

Next week, bookmakers, fun fair and amusement arcade operators and nightclub owners must register all their employes. From January 19 to 24, all men 18 to 25 and women 18 to 21 "not gainfully employed" at least 30 hours a week, must register whether they be peers, company directors, debutantes or prostitutes.

Those thought suitable for job openings will be offered a choice of what is available—generally farm work, coal mining or textile factory work.

Meanwhile black marketeers and tax dodgers threatened to paralyze everyday business life with a new racket—the hoarding of silver coins.

Fear that the Bank of England is about to call in the present bank note issue and replace it with new notes has caused a rush to amass coins which has depleted the Bank's silver coin stocks to only one tenth of its holdings a few months ago.

Eggless Day To Be Dropped Next Week

Eggless Thursdays will end next week.

After that, as the production of eggs reaches its peak in the spring, the public will be urged to substitute eggs for meat.

Meatless Tuesdays will continue, announcement by the Cabinet Food Committee yesterday said.

The action, first announced in The Washington Post Sunday, came after hotel and restaurant associations in many cities advised their members to drop both meatless and eggless days.

James A. Stillwell, executive director of the Voluntary Food Conservation Program, in a special message to public eating places to retain Meatless Tuesdays, said:

"Meat is leading the inflationary spiral in food prices. All reports agree there will not be enough meat for unrestrained consumption this spring and summer. Any action tending to increase, rather than curtail the demand for meat, is contrary to the common good."

Stillwell's announcement indicated that efforts to save grain through slaughter of low-producing hens had failed.

"The Poultry Coordinating Committee recently reported that its program to cull nonproducing hens from flocks is behind schedule. Nearly 36 million inefficient hens are still on a diet of scarce grain."

Lack of Fuel Drives Sculptor to Suicide

New York, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—Herman Steinmetz, 78, architectural sculptor, hanged himself because of despondency believed caused by his inability to get fuel oil to heat his home since Christmas.

A delivery of oil arrived a short time after the body of the sculptor was found in the attic.

Kashmir City Is Besieged By Moslems

Karachi, Pakistan, Jan. 5 (AP).—Reports received here tonight said Moslem tribesmen have surrounded an Indian division in Jammu, winter capital of the Maharajah of Kashmir, and are besieging that city.

The tribesmen reportedly cut the supply road and the trapped Indian troops have been without supplies except by air for two days.

Moslem tribesmen invaded Kashmir State last October.

(India's charge that Pakistan has been aiding the Moslem fighters in Kashmir will come before the United Nations Security Council tomorrow at Lake Success, N. Y. Pakistan has asked for a postponement. U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie said any postponement could be granted only by the Council itself, but this was expected to be granted.)

First-Aid Atom Teams Urged

Cleveland, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—The president of the American Medical Association warned today his profession was unprepared for atomic bomb attacks in which there would be mass casualties.

Dr. Edward L. Bortz, opening the AMA midyear meeting, reminded the 3000 assembled medical men that this was a time of "international disequilibrium and great social unrest."

He said that neither doctors nor hospitals were prepared to care for large numbers of casualties "if an incident precipitated a major catastrophe in the near future."

He advocated establishment of widely dispersed first-aid teams in every community for service in event of an atomic bombardment, and added that it was "high time" organized medicine played a large role in preparing the members of the profession and allied groups for rendering emergency service in time of need.

Federal Judge Rules Atom Board Merely 'Human'

Chicago, Jan. 5 (AP).—A Federal judge ruled today that the five members of the Atomic Energy Commission are "human beings, not divine," and could be approached for testimony in a land owners' suit against the Government.

Judge John P. Barnes granted a petition by Edward B. Hayes, attorney for land owners who are protesting Government condemnation proceedings to obtain their property for an atomic research laboratory.

Hayes said depositions from the commission members are necessary to learn why the Government needed the land for its 30 million dollars Argonne National Laboratory.

Those scheduled to give their testimony, to be taken beginning January 8 in Washington, are David Lilienthal, commission chairman; Robert F. Bacher, Sumner T. Pike, Lewis L. Straus and W. W. Wymack, commission members, and Carl McGowan, Washington attorney who figured in selection of the site.

Shipwreck Survivors Await Rescue Tug

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MAROONED IN FAR NORTH—After five days on a windswept point of the Alaska Peninsula, crewmen of the wrecked cannery tender, Spencer, last night still awaited rescue by a Navy tug and Coast Guard cutter. Six men, and possibly a seventh, are shown (circled) huddled above the capsized, ice-incased tender which went aground December 31. Three others, from the Navy tug, also were marooned when their surfboat overturned in a futile rescue attempt.

Reds Routed On All Fronts, Chinese Say

Peiping, Jan. 5 (AP).—Government dispatches reported an unbroken string of military successes against Communists today in Manchuria and China proper.

Manchuria, where the Communists recently threatened Mukden and Changchun, government forces were reported sweeping Red remnants from all fronts.

Service was reported restored on the Peiping-Mukden railway from China as far north as Chinhsien, 140 miles southwest of Mukden.

In North China, the Nationalists claimed Pauling, capital of Hopeh Province, soon would be out of all danger.

On the political front, Nanking dispatches quoted Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek as ordering a drastic purge of his governing party, the Kuomintang, to weed out disloyal elements.

[The United Press reported Communists struck at Yangtze river communications today, threatening the rich "rice bowl" of South China, but Nationalist gunboats were reported to have pushed back a "serious attempt" to cross into Hunan at Hohsueh.

[Reports of fighting sent prices on the Shanghai market to record highs. The retail price of rice soared to 1,400,000 Chinese dollars for a 110-pound picul. It was 60,000 just one year ago.]

British Reject Soviet Demand On Jap Treaty

London, Jan. 5 (AP).—A renewed Soviet demand for a four-power foreign ministers' meeting to prepare a Japanese peace treaty was rejected today by the British.

A spokesman said Britain reaffirmed the view that the settlement be drafted first by the 11-nation Far Eastern Commission.

He said the British favored neither the Russian proposal nor a Chinese "compromise plan" for a conference of the 11 Far Eastern Commission states, but with decisions subject to the unanimity of Britain, the United States, China and Russia.

The British view is that decisions of the 11-nation conference should be on a two-thirds majority.

Observers here said Russia is fearful of being outvoted in any 11-nation conference, and that she believes her interest would concide with China's on many subjects if only a four-power conference is held.

Canadian Bonds Drop Following Action by Bank

Toronto, Jan. 5 (AP).—The Bank of Canada today withdrew its quotations on Dominion of Canada bonds in a move interpreted in some quarters as an antiinflation step, and part of a drive to stop spiralling of prices.

Other quarters thought it might merely mean the bank has approached the limit of long-term bonds which it may hold under the Bank of Canada Act.

The effect was to bring a drop of from $1.50 to $2.50 in the price of government bonds, though as yet quotations are nominal, with trading discouraged until the real market value can be reestablished.

13 Survivors of Shipwreck Are Rescued in Alaska

KODIAK, Alaska, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—Thirteen half-frozen shipwreck survivors, including two women and a 6-year-old boy, were rescued from the stormy Alaskan coast today by a Coast Guard landing party.

A surfboat crew battled through heavy breakers to reach the rock-strewn cape of the Alaskan Peninsula where the motorship Spencer went ground four days ago, and carried the wreck victims to safety aboard the cutter Clover.

The survivors included six seamen as well as three Navy men who had been marooned in an earlier rescue attempt.

The passengers and crew members were Mrs. Gus Skonberg, Mrs. Ava Skonberg, Calvin Skonberg, 6; Arthur Skonberg, Don Skonberg, William Skonberg, Andrew Skonberg, all of Chignik, Alaska, and Capt. Axel Carlson, Jacob Osbokoff and Bert Larson.

The three Navy men, hurled up on the beach Saturday when their surfboat was smashed on the rocks, were identified as Lt. (j.g.) E. J. Kretocheil, of Washington, D. C.; E. W. Kelly and S. J. Homola, from the Navy fleet tug Mataco.

Three of the Spencer's crew were reported suffering from frozen feet. All suffered from cold and exposure after huddling in rude shelters in subzero temperatures for four days.

TNT Project Clew Found

New York, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—A 24-year-old engineer was sought today in connection with the attempted shipment of 65,000 pounds of TNT to violence-torn Palestine in crates labeled "Machinery."

Customs officials, whose efforts to trace the shipper have been balked since the explosives were discovered Saturday, said evidence will be turned over to U. S. Attorney John F. X. McGohey.

The youth sought was identified only as David Alper. His name was found on letters in a littered warehouse from which the crates of explosives were delivered last week to the American Export Lines freighter Executor.

The American export company ordered a check of two others of its vessels which already are in waters off Palestine. Crates marked "Heavy Machinery" also were aboard the Exchester and Exfort when they sailed from here, the company said.

French Gas to Cost 84 Cents a Gallon

Paris, Jan. 5 (NYHT).—Gasoline will cost Frenchmen 84 cents a gallon, not counting local taxes, the National Assembly decided today. The present price is about 67 cents a gallon.

GOP Plans To Push Probe Of Scandals

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Senate Republican leadership yesterday disclosed plans to establish a superpowerful investigating group to probe the Kansas City vote frauds and other scandals during the 1948 election year.

Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) of the Senate Republican Policy Committee said the group would be formed as a subcommittee of the Senate Executive Expenditures Committee, headed by Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.).

Chairman of the subcommittee, Taft and Aiken disclosed, will be Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), whom the GOP counts as its ace investigator.

The new subcommittee, Taft said, will take over the functions of the Senate War Investigating Committee, whe nits life expires January 31. Present chairman of the war investigating group is Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), whom most GOP leaders blame for last summer's fiasco over the inquiry into the war contracts of Howard R. Hughes, West Coast plane manufacturer.

Decision sto refer the Kansas City vote fraud issue to the expenditures group is designe dto avoid a floor fight and possibly an opposition filibuster almost as soon as Congress opens today over the inquiry resolutoin introduced last session by Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.)

The Kem resolution to investigate the Justice Department and Attorney General Tom C. Clark in connection with the actions of the Pendergast machine in support of a candidate backed by President Truman is technically the first order of business before the Senate.

However, if Kem does not make a floor fight to have his resolution acted upon it can be passed over so that action on the Marshall Plan and other matters will not be backed up behind it. Kem, now en route from Missouri, is quoted by leading Republicans as being very much in favor of the new GOP plan.

Taft indicated that the plan would not necessarily avoid all floor fights since the Executive Expenditures group, with its new investigating subcommittee, will have to have an enlarged staff, greater appropriations, and enlarged subpena powers.

The Ferguson subcommittee, however, will be able to point to its investigation of Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers, who faces arraignment here Wednesday on charges of perjury and subornation of perjury, as an essential public service, and argue that investigations of this kind are necessary.

The Senate War Investigating Committee, once headed by President Truman, was given the right to subpena income tax records. However, last year President Truman said that he was willing to turn those over to the Executive Expenditures group if the war investigating group was not continued by the Senate.

Great and Humble Join in Tribute To Late Dr. Carver

Tuskegee, Ala., Jan. 5 (AP).—The great and the humble joined in tribute today to a frail, slave-born Negro, George Washington Carver, who rose to international fame as a scientist, educator and humanitarian.

Government officials, on the fifth anniversary of Carver's death, praised Dr. Carver in simple memorial ceremonies at Tuskegee Institute, where the renowned Negro spent most of a brilliant career.

Carver, who rose to prominence through research work in peanuts and sweet potatoes, was memorialized with the issuance of a special three-cent stamp.

President Truman sent a telegram and Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson was present to inaugurate the stamp issue.

102 Tickets 'Adjusted' in Traffic Cases

"Fixed" traffic tickets numbered 102 last week as compared to 104 the week before, police reported yesterday.

Of the 102 adjustments, 93 were warnings and 9 cancellations, precinct and traffic division lists showed.

Three motorists were given cancellations for diplomatic immunity. One fireman and a Prince Georges County detective were warned. Tickets were adjusted for eight strangers in the city and for five motorists with previous good records.

3 Granted Immunity

Those persons granted adjustments for diplomatic immunity were:

Sheikh Mohammend Muhtasib, 22, Second Secretary of the Saudi Arabia Legation, who received a ticket for parking in a "no parking at anytime" zone.

pressed in figures.

Charles Schlumpf of the Switzerland Legation, a member of the Committee on Fats and Oils of the International Emergency Food Committee of the FAO. He had received a ticket for parking in an entrance.

Victor Shen of 1601 V st. nw., a member of SUNRRA, China's equivalent to UNRRA. The list showed that he received a ticket for parking in a "no parking at any-time" zone.

The fireman was Pvt. Robert F. Sutphin, attached to No. 2 Engine Co., who received a ticket for parking less than 40 feet from a driveway. The reason given for the adjustment was that he was making an emergency call.

The detective was Richard A. Pearson, 6128 Montrose dr., Cheverly, Md., whose automobile was ticketed while parked less than 40 feet from a corner. The reason given for his warning was that he was stopped momentarily.

Adjustments By Precincts

The number of tickets adjusted in the traffic division and precincts follow:

Traffic Division—12 warnings; one cancellation.

First Precinct—4 warnings; no cancellations.

Second Precinct—3 warnings; no cancellations.

Third Precinct—8 warnings; no cancellations.

Fourth Precinct—11 warnings; no cancellations.

Fifth Precinct—6 warnings; no cancellations.

Sixth Precinct—9 warnings; no cancellations.

Seventh Precinct—3 warnings; no cancellations.

Eighth Precinct—4 warnings; no cancellations.

Ninth Precinct—16 warnings; 2 cancellations.

Tenth Precinct—16 warnings; 2 cancellations.

Collision Puts 8 in Hospital At Frederick

Frederick, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—State police reported an interstate bus collided with a truck near Ridgeville, Carroll County, tonight and that eight persons were taken to a Frederick hospital for treatment.

At Frederick Memorial Hospital, doctors said three women were admitted as patients and that four students at Hood College, Frederick, and a member of the Hood faculty were transferred to the college infirmary for further treatment.

None were hurt seriously, officials said.

They named the three admitted to the hospital as: Mrs. Ella I. Johnson of Mount Airy, Md., slight concussion and body bruises; Mrs. Dorothy Warfield, Woodbine, Md., multiple bruises and a possible nose fracture, and Miss Gertrude Beach, Woodbine, Md., body lacerations.

The Blue Ridge Lines bus was bound from Frederick to Baltimore.

Truman, Lane Discuss Roads

would be required to provide limited-access type highways for five main arteries, according to State Roads Commission estimates. These highways, which would be improved from the District Line in each case to the point described, are given below with the estimated cost:

Washington-Baltimore Boulevard (U. S. 1) to the Jessup-Meade rd., $20,900,000; Rockville Pike (U. S. 240) to Brink, Md., $14,000,000; Defense Highway (U. S. 50) to Annapolis, Md., $16,800,000; Marlboro Pike (Md. 4) to Drury, Md., $8,500,000, and Md. Route 5 to T. B., Md., $7,150,000.

Thirteen other roads involved would cost $51,020,000 under the State's modernization program for which Federal help is asked. They are:

Connecticut ave. (Md. 193), East-West hwy. (Md. 410), Georgia ave.-Colesville rd. (U. S. 29), Georgia ave. extended (Md. 97), New Hampshire ave. (Md. 650), Queens Chapel rd. (Md. 500), Rhode Island ave. (U. S. 1), Largo rd. (Md. 202), Central ave. (Md. 214), Indian Head rd. (Md. 224), Suitland rd. (Md. 218), Massachusetts ave. (Md. 396) and River rd. (Md. 190).

Cites Traffic Conditions

Governor Lane said Maryland feels that the area's traffic conditions are such that she is entitled to receive Federal assistance over and above the regular Federal aid. Current Federal aid for Maryland highways is $4,792,000 per year, an aide said.

While the Federal Highway Act of 1944 provides for money to be spent in urban areas, no regular Federation aid is appropriated for the urban area adjacent to the District of Columbia, the Governor said, whereas this is done in other cities.

The District, he continued, presents conditions that are unparalleled elsewhere in the United States. No other city is a self-contained political unit without tie-in with the surrounding territory, he pointed out. Surveys would indicate that about half of the gasoline tax collected in the District is actually "earned" from travel in Maryland and Virginia, according to the Governor.

Also noted was the fact that "many Federal institutions" are located in Maryland.

Governor Lane also said an estimated 72 per cent of the population of the United States is so located that it must pass through the State of Maryland to reach Washington. This, he said, means that the State's highways are "rendering greater national service to motorists as a whole than is being done in other States."

In answer to questions, General Fleming said the regular Federal highway funds are allocated to the several States on the basis of area, population and post road mileage. Any additional funds, he said, would have to be appropriated by Congress.

Governor Lane was accompanied on his visits to General Fleming and President Truman by Maryland Senators Millard E. Tydings and Herbert R. O'Conor; Representatives Fallon (D.), Miller (R.), Meade (D.), Garmatz (D.), Sasscer (D.), and Beall (R.); Chairman Robert M. Reindollar, Chief Engineer William S. Childs, jr., and two members, Joseph M. George and Russell S. McCain of the State Roads Commission; Chairman Howard Bruce of the Highway Advisory Council, Attorney General Hall Hammond, Louis J. O'Donnell, the Governor's assistant, and these members of the Advisory Council: Herman L. Gruehn, J. Truman Thompson, J. McKenney Willis, jr., T. Howard Duckett, Chester F. Hockley and J. Vincent Jamison, jr.; also William L. Marbury, jr., Charles C. Garland and Herschel H. Allen.

Blaze Destroys First Floor of Landover Home

The interior of the first floor of a Landover Hills, Md., home was destroyed yesterday by fire believed to have started from spontaneous combustion in the basement.

Fire apparatus from four Prince Georges County Volunteer Departments responded to the alarm at 5:40 p. m.

The house at 4110 Fairfax st. was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Eador A. Arneson. Arneson is an information specialist in the Production and Marketing Administration of the Department of Agriculture.

He said all first-floor furnishings were destroyed, adding he believed the fire started from combustion of some rags and painting supplies in the basement.

Witness Tells Of Pier Crack

a City Finance Co. employe who telephoned him about the crack on December 15 that W. R. Marshall, his rental agent, should be contacted for remedial action. Marshall said he had not been informed by the firm of any damage before the collapse.

Papanicolas said he promised loan firm officials that he would hire a man to refinish the desk and fix the "puffed up" wallpaper. The man he employed, Philip Garlick of 9th and L sts., was unable to work during the day, but promised he start next morning, Papanicolas said.

The building collapsed that night shortly before midnight. Four persons were killed and 12 injured in the disaster.

Two witnesses yesterday reported they were told by Brown, the janitor, that Papanicolas had warned him to "keep his mouth shut" about the alleged removal of an abutment in the building. The witnesses were David A. Stoner and Arthur Storke, former tenants of apartments in the building.

Brown was on the witness list for yesterday's session, but turned up an hour after its conclusion with an explanation that he had started work for a new employer and was unable to attend. He promised to testify at the next session tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the board room of the District Building.

Witnesses Say Opening Enlarged

Other witnesses testified that in 1932 an 8-foot 10-inch opening, adjoining the column in which Fields reported finding a crack, was enlarged to 13 feet 6 inches.

The architect for the change was Julius Wenig of the Edmonds Building and the contractor was Moss C. Lee. Both are dead. Oscar Estep, who made the inspections then and checked alterations made last year, said the work was done according to specifications. The actual permit was introduced in evidence.

This permit contained a line reading, "No wall above the floor line." Board members have not yet decided whether this was indeed true or not.

Changes Are Confirmed

Hugh Dollins, engineer computer, and Andrew Panagopoulos, restaurant operator at the time, confirmed the changes. Stoner, too, remembered the alteration and mentioned the existence of an exhaust fan in the wall above the small opening leading from the dining room to the kitchen.

Stoner raised the possibility of another change—this one probably unauthorized. He said the wall between the small opening and the rear wall was reduced to enlarge the opening, leaving only about six inches. George Valleotis, former restaurateur there and Panagopoulos testified that the space formerly was 1 to 2 feet wide.

Witnesses will be taken to the scene after the debris is removed so that more positive identification of the wall area will be possible, Stewart Beall, board chairman, said last night.

Murphy Trial Charges Cut

iously had refused to allow Attorney William J. Rowan to enter the case as a "friend of the court." Rowan represents Fire Capt Joseph W. Conroy who made the original charge that Murphy had demoralized the fire department. Conroy faces trial board action if Murphy is cleared.

Maher, when asked why he drew the charges as stated, declared, "Murphy is Fire Chief. I couldn't charge him as a private or a sergeant. The charges were drawn on the basis of the information I had. I'm not going to argue any of this case with anyone but the (trial) board."

The board stated that is had made a thorough study and could find no District precedent in the case and would have to look to the common law, inasmuch as it constitutes a special tribunal, with its action "wholly subject to review of the courts."

In its opinion, the board stated:

"The authorities seem to hold universally that it is beyond the jurisdiction of a tribunal to remove one from public office for acts committed by that official while occupying a different public office . . . in the same municipal government.

"We feel compelled to hold that the charges as drawn are confined to violations of duty or acts of inefficiency which may have occured while the respondent was acting in his capacity as fire chief . . ."

Defense Counsel Martin F. O'Donoghue and Maher asked the court for two to three days to agree on stipulating some 750 pieces of evidence in the case to speed the trial.

In addition to Canfield, the trial board consists of Joseph A. Wilner, attorney and businessman, and W. P. McCracken, jr., also an attorney.

Lean Days in Philly

2 Houses Open, One With a Hit

By Richard L. Coe

PHILADELPHIA—William Penn's city on the Schuylkill always has been a good theater town, but like Washington and other cities of the road, it now is feeling the effects of slim New York activity during the fall.

Philadelphia has four legitimate theaters, but this week only two are open. Both "Make Mine Manhattan," a revue, and "Strange Bedfellows," a straight comedy, are bound for New York the week of the twelfth.

However, the Walnut will be reopening on the twelfth, with Jessie Royce Landis, Oscar Homolka and Philip Bourneuf in "The Last Dance," an adaptation of Strindberg's "Dodsdance." The next night Nancy Walker arrives in "Look, Ma, I'm Dancin'!" a promising George Abbott musical that spoofs the ballet world.

At the moment, "MakeMine Manhattan" is the town's big hit, with the SRO sign up at the Forrest. Its sketches are neat, its players polished and we're sorry booking arrangements didn't make a Washington visit possible.

Sid Caesar is the leading comic and some idea of the endless complications of show business can be gleaned when you remember that it's nearly 10 months ago that Caesar was here in Washington (at the Romany Room) discussing plans for "Make Mine Manhattan." It's taken all that time for the show to reach the boards.

There are several immensely amusing sketches. One is a takeoff on "Allegro," but you don't need to have seen the controversial Theater Guild hit to enjoy it. The setting is the one you've seen pictured, the chorus off at stage right and the rise and fall of the young doctor acted at stage left. When the mother begins to sing from her bed of her baby's birth, she begins: "Oh, What a Beautiful Borning," and the chorus is quick to tell her she's thinking of the wrong show.

A Critic Named Jukes

Another sketch is particularly appealing to the Nation's minute band of drama critics. A publisher finds he has to appoint a new one and does—in the person of a man named Jukes who's blind, deaf and hates the theater.

In the individual numbers, Caesar does particularly well with his imitation of an ambitious slot machine and some notes on inflation. Joshua Shelley (the Jukes) is delightfully funny in a song about Traftz, a devious restaurant whose T sounds more like Sch.

While most of the sketches and songs have a familiar theme, they're well written and smartly projected so that the show as a whole seems fresh. Hassard Short's suave staging has added a polishing tone to the effect and it seems likely that if the Hartman's slight "Angel in the Wings" can capture New York's approval, certainly "Make Mine Manhattan" should.

While the cast isn't large, there are many pleasant young faces, including Sheila Bond and Gloria Wills, among the ladies—who aren't so much to the fore in this dominantly male set of principals. Veteran David Burns and youthful Max Showalter (a "This Is the Army" veteran) are the other effective male farceurs.

Bonanza Broke

Last weekend Philadelphia saw one of those tragedies of the theater that often seem inexplicable—the collapse of a musical which cost $300,000 to produce. Last week the box-office drew $6000; $26,000 would have meant business.

This was "Bonanza Bound," written by Betty Comden and Adolph Green, who wrote "On the Town," "Billion-Dollar Baby" and the palace's screen version of "Good News."

Evidently intedned to give the Klondike Gold Rush the same satiric approach which served "On the Tawn" so well, "Bonanza Bound" cried aloud for the services of Groucho Marx. There's some talk of this reopening later with someone in the central role strangely assigned to George Coulouris, known as a dramatic actor. If Messrs. Feigay and Smith, the producers, could prevail on the mad Marx to take over—and perhaps interest Martha Raye in joining him—their $300,000 might dribble back.

As it is, the handsome settings and costumes shouldn't have to languish forever. They'd be a natural for "Rose Marie" and we're certain the astute Shubert brothers have anticipated us in this ill wind which will, at least blow somebody good.

'Buzzing' Fine, Term Suspended

Baltimore, Jan. 5 (AP).—A low-flying student aviator who "buzzed" his father's house December 7, received a stiff reprimand and a suspended sentence and fine today from Judge Joseph Sherbow.

The charge was brought against Kenneth A. Tinkler who was convicted on testimony of William F. Hamill, jr., CAA operations representative.

It was the first case of its kind here to be heard in police court, and while a 30-day jail sentence and $2 50 fine were suspended, Judge Sherbow said he intended to show no leniency to pilots convicted of the charge in the future.

T .P. Wright, Civil Areonautics administrator, reported that 15 fliers in Maryland were prosecuted on low-flying charges last month.

Boys With Cap Pistol Cause Runaway, Wreck

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 5.—Two small boys with a cap pistol, caused the wrecking of a wagon and injury to the driver Saturday. The boys fired the pistol, and the horse, drawing a trash wagon, bolted.

All four wheels were torn from the wagon, and the load was scattered in the street. William Crist, the driver, was slightly injured when he jumped.

Distillers Plan Court Tests On Legality of Grain Cuts

Several court actions to test the law cutting down the amount of grain distillers may use in making liquor are being planned, distillers admitted yesterday.

1. A group of distillers, headed by officials of the Schenley Distillers Corporation, met yesterday at the Mayflower. Vice President Thomas Casey of Schenleys said the meeting was "to consult with counsel." Both the constitutionality of the law and the legality of the Agriculture Department's order enforcing it were discussed, he said.

2. Directors of the Distilled Spirits Institute will meet here today. The grain allocation order is "one of several subjects to be discussed," Howard Jones, secretary, said last night. Several DSI directors were present at yesterday's Mayflower meeting, it was reported.

3. At the Agriculture Department it was rumored that an action to test the retroactive features of Secretary of Agriculture Anderson's allocation order will soon be started by the American Distilling Co.

Deductions Arouse Distillers

Under the terms of the anti-inflation law, signed by President Truman last Tuesday, power to limit the consumption of grain by distillers until January 31 was granted the Secretary of Agriculture. Anderson immediately limited the industry to 2,450,000 bushels, compared with more than 8,500,000 in the same period a year ago.

One feature of Anderson's order, however, that aroused several distillers, deducted from each distiller's allocations all grain consumed since last October 25.

On that date the distilling industry agreed with the Citizens Food Committee to shut down completely for 60 days. Several distillers refused. Others resumed operations when the shutdown ended Christmas Day, although Anderson had requested them to continue the shutdown until January 1.

Discrimination Seen

One action that may result from yesterday's meeting, it was said, will be a test of the act's constitutionality on the grounds that it is discriminatory. It is contrary to the Constitution, it will be urged, to single out one industry—distilling—for purposes of grain conservation.

Seton Porter, president of National Distillers, protested yesterday to Anderson about his order. It has already closed all but one of the Nation's distilleries, he said, and will force dismissal of a "considerable portion of our distillery workers."

When the 60-day grain holiday expired December 25, National "reopened a number of our plants, relying upon the assurance of the Administration that no effort would be made to extend the shutdown," Porter wrote. Last week the Secretary allocated "only enough grain to operate our plants for a total of about six days between the date of our voluntary shutdown on October 25, 1947, and January 31, 1948."

In the five days after Christmas, National used up "all but a few handfuls" of their grain allotments under the latter order, Porter said.

Oystering Group To Meet Jan. 15-16

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—The Commercial Watermen's Association of St. Mary's County will meet January 15 and 16 here to set up an oyster committee and hear discussions of oystering problems.

At the first meeting, talks will be given on Potomac River oyster bars and representatives for the oyster committee will be elected.

Patuxnt River oyster bars will be discussed at the second meeting. Speakers will include John E. Clark, chairman of the Board of Natural Resources, and Ralph Hammer, State Shellfish Culturist.

20 Hurt as 2 Buses Collide on Icy Road

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—More than 20 persons were injured when two interurban buses collided today on the ice-covered highway between Weston and Clarksburg.

The accident occurred within the Lost Creek town limits, involving a well-loaded bus en route from Clarksburg to Weston and another making the return trip.

Horseman Finds Hay and Alcohol Don't Mix Well

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—Out of the West End of Richmond galloped Kyle Mabes, a horseman doing it the hard way.

No stirrups.

He came a cropper but mounted to try again when Officers G. L. Eckert and N. A. Hughes came up. They decided a charge of drunkenness would be about rgiht.

Mabes dismounted—intentionally this time—and disclosed he had a revolver tucked in his belt.

So the cops said they'd have to make it carrying a concealed weapon, too.

Mihai Awaits His Princess In Lausanne

Lausanne, Switzerland, Jan. 5 (AP).—Former King Mihai, who abdicated the throne of Romania, returned here today for a prospective reunion with a Danish princess who has vowed to "follow him wherever he goes."

Cries of "down with communism!" and "long live the King!" greeted the 26-year-old former monarch. He seemed surprised, but did not smile.

He drove to the lakeside hotel where he stayed last month with his mother, Queen Helen, and Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma, whose hand he is reported seeking in marriage.

A spokesman said Mihai's plans were "very indifinite" but added the "Romanian government has given the King the possibility to return to Romania with part of his entourage."

He added Mihai intended to make a full statement on his position "in a few days."

Telephones Princess

Copenhagen, Denmark, Jan. 5 (AP).—Princess Anne had a 10-minute telephone conversation today with Mihai after his arrival in Lausanne. Mihai telephoned her and "seemed elated."

Hagerstown Blaze Routs Family of 6

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—Fires here over the weekend destroyed the home of a family of six and burned to the ground a 2-story clubhouse.

Flames apparently from a coal oil stove routed Mr. and Mrs. Charles House and their four children from an abandoned garage they used for a dwelling. They were focer to scurry to safety in their nightclothes and watch their belongings destroyed.

Earlier that afternoon the clubhouse at Quin Oaks Riding Academy 8 miles from here was destroyed at a loss estimated at $5000.

Canadian Minister To Visit Annapolis

Tuck to Study Recommendations Of Va. Sheriffs

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—Governor Tuck promised today to give "every careful consideration" to a series of recommendations from the Virginia State Sheriffs and City Sergeants' Association, but he declined to say how far he would go in adopting the complete legislative program urged by the group.

E. J. Martin, president of the association, made public Saturday, a four-point legislative program which would include increases in fees charged for services rendered by the court officers, and an increase in court costs for jail board.

The Governor agreed with a comment from Martin that costs of serving papers frequently ran far more than income from the fee. This is particularly true, the Governor said, when mileage costs and other travel expenses are computed.

The sheriffs and city sergeants indicated they would ask that bills be introduced this month embodying their proposed program.

Boy Is Born on Seat Of Bus in Richmond

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—A Greyhound Bus and the stork staged a race here late last night—and the bus lost.

Mrs. Magnolia Salad, 24, Phoenixville, Pa., gave birth a a husky boy on the back seat of the bus a few moments after the driver pulled over to the curb.

She told the doctor she and her two older children had been visiting in Devereux, Ga., and had started the long ride home Saturday.

PEACE IS OUR RESPONSIBILITY

We want to live at peace. We want to raise our children and see them raise their children unmolested. We were born during one world war and have lived through another. That is enough.

Our Secretary of State has come home to report that he cannot make peace for us.

The United Nations has not yet come up with anything that looks like peace.

Generals, and Foreign Ministers, and leagues and unions and federations of sovereign states, have not assured us what we want . . . and they have certainly had plenty of time to show what they can do.

It seems clear that folding our hands in prayer, or exercising our rights at the polls, or leaving the job to our One Worlders, will not suffice . . . at least not soon enough.

So what is left? Ourselves.

We know, for ourselves, that we are ready to live at peace. We are ready to give first allegiance to our fellow men in the world community, ready to renounce our share of "sovereign prerogatives" for the universal right to live and let live.

We want nothing that can be won for us by pushing others around, and we hold to nothing that invites others to push us around.

We know we can live among our fellows by common rules—with perhaps a few policemen on the job in case we waver—because we have done so all our lives. We know we could work out a pretty good basic set of rules to live by; we don't need ponderous constitutions or the solemn compacts of High Contracting Parties; any one of us could do better for the world comunity than has been done that way.

Knowing these things, what should we do? If peace—real peace—is not to be made for us, perhaps we can make our own, man to man, with every human being who will share it. We can assume direct, personal responsibility for ourselves. We can speak quietly with our own voices, to say what has never yet been said clearly by those who speak for us.

Standing alone we shall have little effect on the course of great affairs. But perhaps we are not alone. If we, who are followers, touch common ground where we can stand together—or find that we stand already on common ground—we shall have won more for ourselves than our leaders promise us in all the years ahead.

At least to try seems worth the effort.

We are leaving our community in a few weeks to go about the world talking with human beings. We are going to ask them where they stand, to learn if we are indeed alone or in the company of numbers.

And before we set out we would like to talk with you.

We will be at home, one mile beyond Wheaton on U. S. Route 97 out of Silver Spring, on Sundays from 10 a. m. until midnight, and at 2008 Q Street N.W., in Washington, on Wednesdays from noon until 10 p. m.

Please come and see us.

J. C. and R. G. King.

Writer Sees South Clinging To White Rule

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—A Southern historian took a long and searching look at his native section, and concluded today that the South is everlasting, and will continue to maintain its identity and to espouse the one-party political system and the doctrine of white supremacy.

Dr. Francis Butler Simkins, a native South Carolinian and associated professor of history at State Teachers College in Farmville, Va., where he has been a faculty member for 19 years, was in Richmond in connection with publication of his book, "The South Old and New."

The definitive history of the mores that have prevailed and, Simkins said, always will prevail below the Mason-Dixon Line, covers the period from 1820 into 1948. He selected 1820 as a departure point because in that year the slavery issue was touched off in Congress as a prelude to the Missouri Compromise.

The book is an exploration of the region as to race, religion, political practices, social customs, agriculture, commerce and industry, as well as architecture, literature and the fine arts.

Simkins disclosed that his thesis could well be summed up by calling it "The South Retains Its Past"—a title, incidentally, he submitted to his publisher (Knopf).

Simkins, who has taught also at the University of North Carolina and Emery University, will teach a course in Southern history next year at Louisiana State.

Financing Plans Of 2 Va. Utilities Given Approval

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission gave its approval today to financing plans of two Virginia public utilities.

The SCC authorized the Commonwealth Natural Gas Corp., of Lynchburg, to issue 3000 shares of its common stock, for cash, at a $1 par, to Michael E. Shea and James O. Watts, jr., (1000 shares apiece) and Charles V. Shannon and Stanley M. Morley (500 shares apiece.) Proceeds of the stock issue are to cover obligations incurred in the design, location and construction of facilities.

Also approved was the application of Northern Virginia Power Co. to issue and sell, for cash, 27,000 shares of its $100 par common stock to the Potomac Edison Co. Proceeds of the issue will finance utility construction in 1948.

Norfolk's Ex-Mayor Hurt in Collision

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—Dr. James M Reed, former Mayor of Norfolk, is being treated in a local hospital today for injuries suffered Sunday when his automobile collided with a bus on Granby st. near Talbot Park. The hospital reported he was suffering from shock, facial and chest injuries, but that his condition was not considered critical.

TWICE your money back... if you don't agree SU-PURB granulated SOAP
1. IS SOAPIER
2. IS KINDER TO YOUR HANDS than the soap you are now using*

LADIES...LET'S TAKE 'EM UP ON THIS "LET'S GET RE-ACQUAINTED" OFFER

AREN'T MEN FUNNY? THEY'VE HAD A LABORATORY MAKE A LOT OF TESTS...JUST TO PROVE WHAT YOU AND I CAN TELL THE MINUTE WE USE SU-PURB GRANULATED SOAP!
SU-PURB IS UP TO 16% SOAPIER!
UP TO 26 TIMES KINDER!
SU-PURB Granulated SOAP
THE SOAP WITH THE RARE-LASTING INGREDIENT
16% more
BRAND A BRAND B
BRAND C
An impartial laboratory testifies that a package of SU-PURB is soapier than the best of 3 leading brands tested — as much as 16 per cent soapier than one brand tested!
The same laboratory testifies that SU-PURB gives you far more of the protective "hand lotion ingredient"—over 26 times more than one of the leading brands tested!

*YOU BUY AT OUR RISK! We think that once you try SU-PURB you'll say, "Here's my soap!"

So as an introductory offer, we invite you to buy a package of SU-PURB—and test it out any way you like. SU-PURB's grand for everything... from heavy washing like overalls to daintiest nylons and prints. And see how it hustles you through dishwashing!

Unless you agree with us that SU-PURB (1) is soapier and (2) is kinder to your hands than the soap you are now using, simply return the remaining soap in SU-PURB package to the store where you bought it, for a refund of twice the purchase price.

Take advantage of this offer right away! It's for a limited time only.

A woman in Missouri used the same thing quicker: "I use only half as much Su-purb to get a tub full of rich suds." (letter on file)

A Seattle housewife owes it to the post horn: "Thanks to the hand lotion ingredient in Su-purb my hands are always smooth and soft like a girl's" (letter on file)

All this—and THRIFTIER, too!

You not only use less... you actually pay less for SU-PURB than for any of the 3 famous granulated soaps tested. On the average, you'll save about 2 cents a package every time you buy SU-PURB in the regular 24 oz. size!

New Session

The word momentous has been so overworked that we hesitate to use it descriptively of the second regular session of the Eightieth Congress. Yet we cannot think of a word more appropriate. The session is, indeed, of grave consequence. At home there is inflation; abroad, aggression. A positive policy on both fronts must be pursued unremittingly as the price of the recapture of economic stability and the avoidance of war. Unfortunately our present set up is the friend of nonaction. In a presidential year partisan politics are at a premium; Congress is run by the party in opposition to the party of the President; and the congenital habit of Congress, under our separation of powers system of government, is to regard its function as a negative one.

Speaker Martin at the beginning of this Congress told the Nation that the Republicans would act as Americans. Here was a recognition of the dilemma of government with a Republican Congress and a Democratic President. The reminder is pertinent to White House as well as Capitol Hill. What Bagehot calls the "efficient secret" of government is men working together rather than perfect institutions or constitutions. This is what the Nation demands in the crucial year ahead, and what most of a world that is almost in tributary relation to this Nation prays for. We hope that a joint sense of responsibility will prevail, instead of a mutual evasion of it.

Strife In India

The thorny issue which has arisen betwcen India and Pakistan is in reality a common problem for both. It is the problem of the unruly tribesmen of the Northwest Province. Never has the border been pacified, and the British Raj reduced trouble-making to a minimum by a system of subsidies, coupled with periodical police measures. Now the purse has been withdrawn, along with the British border patrol. If this fact is borne in mind, there will be less disposition to think of the trouble as due wholly to Pakistan's use of the fierce tribesmen as pawns in the seizure of Kashmir. Such a strategem would simply boomerang into Pakistan faces. For the Karachi government has as much reason as the Delhi government to be disturbed about the irruption on the Northwest frontier. To be sure, the status of the adjacent state of Kashmir still has to be settled. But, no matter how it is settled, the border tribes will continue to be a thorn in the flesh of the Pakistanis.

India has submitted the issue of Kashmir to the Security Council. There appears to be only one way of dealing with it, and that is to order a plebiscite. Kashmir is predominantly Moslem, but has a Hindu prince, who seems to have a gift for intrigue and cunning. It may be found that in the area which is now in an uproar such a plebiscite is impossible of execution. In that event the two dominions should explore the possibility of concerted measures for producing the same kind of frontier pacification system that the British used. The interest of both dominions is involved. If there is not a return to relative tranquillity there, the Northwest will keep India as well as Pakistan in a continual state of disturbance. In addition, it might act as a high road for Communist elements through Afghanistan with instructions to stir up domestic dissension in both dominions. The issue demands the same kind of statesmanship which both sides have hitherto displayed in apportioning the assets and liabilities of India.

This task has been immense. And it has been handled with the minimum of suspicion and the maximum of objectivity. Sardar Patel, India's Deputy Premier, did not exaggerate the other day when he said, "Rarely have matters of such complexity been settled in so reasonable a way between two independent and sovereign states." He was right—so right that the world, thinking that a free India would be the signal for a long civil war, watched and marveled. The danger of big scale strife is still present, for the Kashmir situation has all the makings of civil war, especially as there is a background of religious friction of the depth and intolerance that once kept all Europe in turmoil. A truce to reciprocal suspicion and a recognition that the Northwest border is a common problem—these are the desiderata, in addition to a plebiscite in Kashmir, for settlement.

Little Assembly

The first meeting of the Little Assembly at Lake Success yesterday marks the beginning of a new period in the development of the United Nations. There is no warrant for the Soviet Union's view that the creation of the Little Assembly involved a violation of the United Nations Charter. But it certainly did involve the creation of new machinery that was not specifically contemplated by the founders of the U. N. at San Francisco. The truth is that the 41 nations which approved this step are moving, within the scope of permissible discretion under the Charter, to devise and to utilize more effective peace machinery than that which has operated in the last two years.

It is said that the Little Assembly, or Interim Committee, as it is officially known, will move with great precaution in the hope of reassuring the Russians, who are now boycotting it. That is good strategy. The Little Assembly is not anti-Russian. Nor is it a tool of the United States. Its genuinely international character ought to be demonstrated from the beginning, and of course its doors should always be open to welcome the participation of the USSR and its satellies whenever they are disposed to abandon their aloofness. The best hope for peace lies in a continued working together on the part of the great powers regardless of what their differences may be.

We should be blind, however, not to see in this new mechanism a preponderant demand among the powers for peace machinery that can operate in spite of opposition from one nation or a small minority of nations. Hope that the Security Council might grapple with the disputes of our time in a realistic way has been disappointed. While it remains impotent and almost voiceless because of Russia's exercise of the veto, the moral power lodged in the General Assembly must be invoked in the most effective possible manner. To be sure, the Little Assembly cannot become a second Security Council minus the veto. But it can turn the light of fact and intelligent discussion on aggressive conduct. It can watch trouble centers and initiate special sessions of the General Assembly, if necessary, to consider a threat to the peace.

Probably more important is the Little Assembly's assignment to study the problem of the Security Council veto and report back to the next session of the Assembly. Involved in this study is nothing less than the future of the United Nations. Here again, the Little Assembly has no authority to change the big-power veto. But it has a real opportunity to mobilize world opinion against the veto and to initiate means whereby the cooperating nations within the U. N. can jointly protect themselves against aggression without waiting for unanimity between the East and the West. In our opinion the Little Assembly would be false to its trust if it did not explore this problem thoroughly in the light of events that are fast dividing the one world visualized at San Francisco into two hostile armed camps. Its gigantic task is to devise plans to make the U. N. a controlling international force in the living present. That is an undertaking almost equal in significance to the San Francisco Conference itself.

Middle East

No means are available to us to check British charges that Jewish refugees seeking to enter Palestine from the Balkans are hand-picked Communists or left-wing sympathizers with links to the Stern gang. But the kind of Arab who is leading the resistance to the U. N. plan to partition Palestine needs no check. His record is plainly written in the pages of the war's history. At the head and front is the Mufti of Jerusalem, the notorious Haj Amin el-Husseini, the man whom Mr. Churchill called Britain's worst enemy. The Mufti, slipping through British fingers, spent the war in Berlin, plotting with the Germans against Britain's interests. He has around him the same breed of trouble-maker as himself.

This was brought out in a recent dispatch from Jerusalem. The most active man in the field at the moment, according to Emile Ghory, a leading Arab nationalist in Palestine, is Sheikh Hassen Salameh. Sheikh Salameh during the war was a German major, and he was dropped by parachute in Palestine to undermine the British. Unlike the Mufti, whom the French picked up in Germany, only to let him escape from Paris, he was never caught. This is the character who is in charge of the Arab forces in the whole Lydda-Jaffa district, and, according to the New York Times correspondent in Jerusalem, "probably was responsible for the numerous recent train robberies." The other field commanders have the same common denominator of anti-British and pro-Nazi activity. They are merely identified as leaders in the 1941 revolt in Iraq headed by the Mufti and Rashid Ali which sought to turn Iraq over to the Nazis. It is curious that these Arab gentry get no mention in recent comment of British "spokesmen" in Britain.

Since the General Assembly's Palestine recommendation the comments from London have been as irregular as some of the acts in Palestine of the British-officered Arab Legion of Trans-Jordania. The concern in London seems to be with the attribution of pro-Soviet motives to the Jews in Palestine. To be sure, there are Communists in Palestine, as in every other country. In Palestine they appear to make up the notorious Stern gang, which arose as the result of the delay in attending to the Palestine problem. It is a small group of terrorists. In all likelihood they were back of the dynamiters of the offices of the Arab Higher Committee in Jaffa last weekend. But we take leave to doubt whether the 10,000 or so Balkan refugees trying to get into Palestine are, as to the "bulk" of them, Communists. All we know about them is that they include 5000 children fleeing from anti-Semitic lands where they have been freshly persecuted. It is time that the British "spokesmen" tuned their comment to a regard for their responsibilities as the mandatory power and for their membership of the United Nations.

New State

The revolt of Asia is one of the turning points in history with which the Western world is called upon to deal. It was expedited by the Japanese aggressor. Japan led the "Asia for the Asiatics" movement, and nailed upon her standard of war the legend of the Greater Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere. Many Asiatics in their innocence took the Japanese at their word, including the Burmese, whose nationalism led them to make a secret pact with the Japanese even before Pearl Harbor. When the blow did strike, and the Japanese attacked Burma, they were greeted by priests running to the assistance of the "liberators." The dignified Burmese were quickly disillusioned by the brutal behavior of the Japanese military. Under the brilliant leadership of U Aung San, who was assassinated last July 19, they changed sides and helped the Western Allies to defeat Japan.

The reward of the Burmese is the independence which becomes a fact this week in ceremonies and celebrations in war-scarred Rangoon. Unlike India, they dispensed with allegiance to the British Crown, though of their own free will they have joined with Britain in a military alliance. Relations with the former paramount power are excellent. In Burma the British have made a virtue of necessity—an example that other colonial proprietors in Asia, faced with the same problem, might emulate. Premier Thakin Nu attests his "admiration and friendship" for Britain, while the man who seems to have the major talent for administration in the new cabinet, U Tin Tut, Minister of both Foreign Affairs and Finance, was schooled at England's Cambridge, and retains a regard for Britain.

But what a problem the new Burmese government has to solve! Burma is a country of 17 million people who have hitherto left most of the brain work to the British, Chinese and Indians. Outsiders even did most of the work in the factories. The racial stock is Mongolian, but there are so many differences in the population that 126 native languages and dialects are spoken. The job of the new administration is to try to bring homogeneity to Burma and to fit the people to do the tasks which they have hitherto left to foreigners. Independence is heady wine, and the danger lies in the pace of Burmafication. Too much haste would be ruinous. Burma, which is a rich country in rice, lumber, minerals and precious stones, is assured of a welcome to the world family. From America in particular there will be felicitations, for Burma is second to America in severing all constitutional links with the British Empire.

GSI Strike

Whether the officers of Local 471 of the United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers Union have signed the anti-Communist affidavit provided by the Taft-Hartley law seems to us to be irrelevant to the issue in the strike of 1500 cafeteria workers against Government Services, Inc. The fact that the officers have not signed will be, to be sure, a black mark against the union in the estimation of many persons, including ourselves. It will seem to corroborate the charges that the local's parent union, the United Public Workers, is Communist-dominated. However, judging from the statement of Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, president of GSI, GSI is making use of this reaction to support its refusal to bargain with the union.

The fact is, however, that the anti-Communist affidavit is required only for certification by or recourse to the National Labor Relations Board. It does not apply to ordinary negotiations between union and management. Actually, Local 471 never has been formally certified by the NLRB, either before or after the advent of the Taft-Hartley law. An informal election conducted by the Government originally confirmed Local 471 as a bargaining agent because of GSI's contention that its position as a quasi-governmental agency made the Wagner Act inapplicable. Thus GSI's insistence that certification be a prerequisite to bargaining in this case represents a complete switch from its previous stand.

Whether the union's demand for a 15-cent an hour raise and adjustment of working conditions is excessive we are not prepared to state. The employes represented are in the lowest wage brackets, as exemplified by the average weekly take-home pay of $21.91 cited by the union, and hence are particularly vulnerable to the squeeze of inflation. In any event, it seems to us that an acceptable settlement on this score should not be difficult if GSI were to forego its legalism and make a real effort to get together with the union. On this point it is significant that the union already has concluded an amicable agreement with the operators of the Pentagon cafeterias and is in the process of reaching a similar agreement at the Department of Agriculture.

MORNING WINDOW

You have not learned the color of blue
Until you waken where a star,
Having robbed forget-me-nots of blue
And fled with the delicate stuff afar,
Heard morning come on graying boot,
Shed in a hurry some of her glow
And spilled the shimmering azure loot
At the first open sill below.

Chinese Censorship

(By Cable)

Deeply regret appearance of your recent editorial alleging censorship in China. (Editor's note: The editorial was entitled "Judd's Monopoly" and appeared December 26.) This office has never relaxed in its policy of keeping the channels of news open. I have issued statement answering editorial. I realize you are as anxious as we to support sound Sino-American relations, but effect of incorrect statements will be deeply hurtful on both sides. I have heard many good things about your sincere friendship for China.

HOLLINGTON K. TONG,
Director, Government Information Office.

Nanking, China.

Editor's note: The editorial must have been incorrectly reported. What it said was "censorship at the source," meaning censorship in the dispensation, not the transmission, of news. This was reported to us by the service on which we rely for news of China and which we had questioned. We are glad to have an assurance which all newspapermen will welcome.

Community Property

The Washington Post in its editorial columns, and Malvina Lindsay in her excellent column, have ably shown the injustice in present proposals to allow married couples to split their incomes for Federal tax purposes. I am sorry, however, that the tax issue has been allowed to obscure the original concept of community property, which marks a great advance over Anglo-Saxon property relationships.

In the original community property States male wage-earners did not benefit at all from the law which assigned half their earnings to their wives. On the contrary, the idea behind the law was to protect women. The income in such States has always been split—literally, legally, and quite aside from tax considerations—so that a married woman is granted equal economic status with her husband.

When a marriage is dissolved, either by death or divorce, half the savings of the couple belongs by law to the wife. The underlying concept is that in a partnership of this kind, particularly when a woman is prevented by child-bearing from herself engaging in gainful occupation, the total earnings of the family are as much hers as her husband's.

Community property existed in the West for years before high Federal income taxes made the split income an advantage for the wage-earner. It seems to me that current Republican proposals to "equalize benefits" between community and noncommunity property States ignores the important difference: that in community property States income is really divided between husband and wife, and that elsewhere it is not.

A Californian may for years reap tax benefits by the split income provision. But let his wife divorce him, and the loss of half his property will far outweigh his tax gains.

The present proposal to allow the same benefits of divided income to residents of the 48 States is both absurd and dishonest. As The Washington Post has pointed out, the benefits will go almost entirely to the wealthy. But as The Washington Post has not pointed out, the proposal does not even have the merit of granting equal treatment to all married couples. If the resident of a common law State does not split his income in fact, why should Congress permit him to split it in legal fiction?

Marshall Plan Delay

In The Washington Post of January 2, Representative Eaton, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, is reported as saying that "Congress action on the Marshall Plan may be delayed two months beyond the Administration's April 1 deadline." "I wouldn't set any date," he told reporters, "but if we get it through by June 1, we'll be fortunate."

This is disappointing.

The Marshall Plan may not be perfect as to details, but it has the indorsement of a large group of competent men who have made a special study of conditions in Europe, and it is apparently viewed with favor by the majority of citizens of the United States as well as by leading representatives of Great Britain, France an dother European countries. Its merits have been fully set forth in various speeches by Secretary of State Marshall, and the subject has been given liberal space in all our leading newspapers.

Why, then, should it be necessary for the Congress of the United States to spend days and weeks and months in irresponsible speechifying while a critical world situation hangs in the balance? In other words, why cannot the deliberative body of this great Nation consider and act finally on the Marshall Plan within a reasonable length of time? Congress acted promptly in carrying on a great war. Why cannot its members show equal efficiency in working for world peace?

Defense Parsimony

Let's start 1948 right. Drew Pearson in his column this first day of January mistakenly bolsters his arguments for needed congressional understanding on peacetime needs with inaccurate statements.

He charges "The Republican isolationists who voted against defenses of Guam and have been trying to make their constituents back home forget the fact . . ."

As a matter of fact, President Roosevelt opposed the proposal because he said that such a procedure would offend a friendly nation (Japan). Further, no legislation was ever voted on in Congress for the fortification of Guam—a fact which can't be charged to Republicans or Democrats, isolationist or otherwise.

Further, in 1939 Republican Senator Lodge of Massachusetts introduced a two-ocean Navy bill—and it was the same President Roosevelt who declared it to be silly.

Again—in 1940, the President had some 400 million dollars at his disposal for national defense—and yet our National Guard troops used broomsticks for guns, stovepipes for cannon, and other synthetic weapons and equipment. This was after the Guard was federalized.

What Pearson complains about, the postwar parsimony of Congress as to preparedness is in a larger measure true but unjust blame for this doesn't help the situation.

National Health Insurance

This writer wishes to thank The Washington Post for publishing the intelligent January 3 challenge by Michael M. Davis of my letter of December 19. This letter proposed establishing a prepayable national health security insurance fund with the Federal Security Administration as comptroller. The nonprofit corporate boards of Blue Cross, the American Hospital Association, and a similar fiducial agency designated by the AMA optionally would qualify under Federal definition as State or regional units of administration.

Mr. Davis questions the propriety of a private corporation acting as a State or regional agency disbursing public funds substantially for its own remuneration. By this penetrating challenge Mr. Davis focuses our collective sincerity and ingenuity upon the basic ideological issue to be adjudicated and conciliated.

We have all been guilty of distorted partisan perspective in our long debate over national health insurance. Ideologically our problem is three dimensional. These dimensions pertain to basic equities that are social, economic and administrative in character. Most of us are in essential agreement with the social equities involved. President Truman repeatedly has voiced them in terms this writer presumes to summarize: It is the direct concern of the Nation to provide every citizen with the option of a noncancellable, nondiscriminating floor of minimal health security. The realities of the present impasse may require Mr. Truman further to state that ceilings properly are the sovereign concern of State initiative and social aggressiveness. This means solvent self-help without all-encompassing paternalism.

The economic equities may be stated as follows: The fair cost of dependably providing this minimal health security shall be the common burden of all in direct proportion to their solvency. All shall contribute equitably and all shall participate in guaranteed benefits in accordance with their demonstrated need.

But it is the administrative blueprint which would convert these social and economic equities into low cost and efficient performance that baffles us. The only official spokesman of 130,000 qualified doctors, namely the AMA, fearful that previously proposed administrative methods vicariously may permit a nonelected administrative agency usurp the policy making powers of Congress. It is determined to resist creation of any bureaucratic agency capable of subverting administrative authority to alter the traditional contract between doctor and patient.

This approved contractual relationship may be defined as the unqualified right of every patient freely to select the doctor of his choice rather than the State or the doctor must be in dictatorial control of the healing arts. This postulates that the method of administration must sensitively be responsive both to the patient's approval and the patient's displeasure.

To this end it was proposed to use existing and efficiently functioning agencies for State-approved administration of the 140 million potential regional health insurance accounts. The State administration would be limited to issuing policies, processing claims for benefits and certifying their audit for payment to FSA. It was not contemplated that they disburse public monies. Rather their province would be the minute and intimate detail inseparable from State autonomy. Only FSA would disburse the insurance fund in accordance with actuarial commitments defined by Congress. Instead of expanding to centralize the impossible detail of 140 million accounts, FSA would deal with the accounts of approximately 180,000 qualifying doctors and 6280 approved hospitals.

Under this arrangement only an unchallengeable fiscal relationship would exist between the Federal Government and participating doctors and service units. But inherent in this relationship would be the right of Congress, nationally to define and enforce minimal standards of qualifying competency for both participating doctors and essential service units. Fraud or conspiracy by either doctor or hospital would be punishable as an offense against the Federal Government. Its detection and prosecution would be Federal initiative and jurisdiction. By making the State financially responsible for all fraud, conspiracy, malfeasance or pertinent administrative error, the certifying State machinery would be responsive to the electorate.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Year Of Decision

OVER AND over, the prophets and the soothsayers have told us this is a year of decision. That is the note sounded, sometimes with the emphasis on doom around the corner, as the number on the calendar is changed.

What America must choose between is too often left vague. But one thing is by now abundantly clear.

The longer there is delay, inaction and uncertainty as to America's intentions and capacities, the more likely it becomes that the choice will be between the two extremes of left and right. And those two extremes of communism and fascism are equally repugnant to the average American.

A world in flux will not wait on American indecision. In Europe, hunger and despair are destroying what is left of the middle ground. Increasingly, Europeans are being pulled to one pole or the other.

Helping this process along are the plotters and the intriguers in both America and Europe who want to make it seem that the choice is between one kind of absolutism or another. Delay and indecision are what these plotters want.

Greece is a perfect example. Our aid program in that tragic country is too little, too late, too timid.

So the process of pulling apart continues. A recent flareup in Athens illustrates the difficulty of trying to reconstruct moderation when breakdown has gone so far.

ONE OF the key members of the American Aid Mission in Greece is Clinton Golden. Formerly an officer of the CIO Steelworkers Union, Golden was approved by both AFL and CIO as the labor adviser on the mission. At a dinner in his honor, Philip Murray spoke in favor of the Greek program, thereby slapping down the leftists in his own organization who wanted to take another line and oppose the program.

Under great handicaps, Golden has made progress in getting Greek employers, unions and the government together. On November 15 an agreement was signed under which the government agreed to consult with union leaders on labor legislation.

Then, suddenly, jittery reactionaries in the Athens government put over a fast one. They got a decree passed providing prison sentences for anyone who went on strike.

But that was not the worst feature of the decree. It provided the death penalty in the event that a strike should do damage to either property or life. Leaders of the striking union would be subject to the death penalty even though they had had no direct conection with the incident.

GOLDEN WAS wild. He had no sympathy with the head of the Utility Workers Union who was threatening to call a strike But he felt that the decree—intended to prevent the strike—would wreck all his efforts.

When there seemed to be little inclination in the mission to try to have the error corrected, Golden sent an indignant cable to Washington. He suggested that under the circumstances he could hardly stay on.

That jolted the State Department. There is general agreement today both in Washington and in Athens on the need to erase this blunder. It may be done through an official Greek interpretation of the decree making it clear that the drastic penalties would not be applied except in acts of sabotage aimed at the security of the state.

Americans in Greece face a tough dilemma. Officals in the State Department say: "In a country threatened with destruction by civil war, it may be necessary to declare martial law and temporarily suspend all civil rights."

If the situation in France should deteriorate into open civil war, America would face the same dilemma in western Europe. And the average American would be inclined to pull away from a choice presented in terms of warring reds and blacks.

Each day that European reconstruction is delayed makes the peril greater. It is truly a year of decision. But if too much time is wasted, there will be nothing left to decide between. The choice will be an empty one.

Subchaser Housing

I read with a great deal of interest Marshall Andrews' story of January 3 concerning subchasers which the Maritime Commission is trying to sell for $1500 each. The statement that these boats were "about as useless to a civilian as a PT boat" brought memories to my mind.

When I was general counsel for the Office of Foreign Liquidation Commissioner, Department of State, in Manila, we had a number of PT boats to dispose of as surplus property. By featuring the advantages of the boats as emergency housing units, a demand was created far in excess of the available supply.

The PT boats, as I recall it, had galleys which were fairly well equipped, and the boats could be made quite livable. It may be that the subchasers are not similarly equipped, and that for technical reasons with which I am not acquainted they are not as readily adaptable as were the PT boats sold in Manila. However, it seems to me that a 110-foot boat has housing possibilities, and if the Maritime Commission were to call attention to the possibility of using the boats in this unfamiliar way, they might prove to be anything but a drug on the market.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

After The Truman Doctrine

Lippmann

THE EVOLUTION of United States foreign policy has reached a point where it may be said that a considered general conception can now prevail over improvisation at scattered points all over the globe. It is now possible, I believe, to discern the new pattern of American policy. It has developed as a result of responsible reexamination of the problem of European reconstruction in relation to the Marshall Plan, and of the European political situation, and of American military strategy.

THE GRAND result of all these studies is that it is not possible, nor desirable, nor necessary to treat western Europe plus western Germany as a military bastion against the expansion of the Soviet power. It is not possible to do this because the Germans cannot be relied upon as allies. It is not desirable to rebuild western Germany as a military arsenal because in the event of war on the continent the Red Army could easily capture it. Finally it is not necessary to do it because the effective way to check the expansion of the Soviet power is not on land in continental Europe but by the use of sea and air power to dominate the heart of Russia itself.

From this it follows that American military policy need not be based on the organization of an anti-Soviet coalition which would have to be subsidized, stiffened, and held in line with American money, American troops, and endless intervention in the internal affairs of our allies. American military policy would, on the contrary, be based on the revolutionary development of air power, which can strike from a distance at the center and bypass the periphery.

THIS ALTERS radically our fundamental relationship to the nations of Europe. To put it bluntly their protection against the Red Army is not in their fortifications and in their troops, and in our troops, but in our power to strike at the Russian homeland from bases outside the continent of Europe. Since in the event of war their role is not to be the bridgehead, the aircraft carrier, and therefore the battlefield, they can devote their energies to internal reconstruction and to European economic cooperation.

This conception, which is based on military considerations, is fortified by the conclusion of all the studies which underlie the Marshall Plan. They have shown that the restoration of trade between eastern and western Europe is necessary both to the West and to the East. Without it western Europe must undertake a revolutionary change, which could not be achieved in a generation, in the character of its trade. Without it eastern Europe must pass through a long period of economic stagnation.

Therefore, despite all that the Communists say against the Marshall Plan, despite all that some Americans say about not trading with eastern Europe, the fact is that the nations on both sides of the iron curtain are eagerly and persistently reaching out towards one another. The remarks made by Mr. Ripka, the Czechoslovak Minister of Foreign Trade, reflect the realities. The Marshall Plan is a plan which will unify, which will not divide further, the continent of Europe, and if it works at all, every European country will participate in it and will benefit from it.

THIS GENERAL pattern of policy which has gradually emerged during the past year will not be confirmed and established until Congress has adopted the Marshall Plan and the military policy which is its corollary. But already the new conception has had important practical results.

Thus the idea has been abandoned by all responsible men that western Germany should be formed as a state and that we should make a separate peace with it. We have avoided thus far, and in all probability we shall succeed in avoiding, entanglement as active participants in the Chinese civil war. We have avoided also direct military participation in the Greek civil war. The disposition to intervene in the internal affairs of Great Britain, France, and Italy is decidedly less strong than it was in the heyday of the so-called Truman Doctrine. There has come also a better understanding and greater wisdom in our dealings with the nations of the Soviet orbit. And we have learned, as is indicated by our conciliatory approach to the problems of the Little Assembly, that the United Nations should not be treated as expendible in the cold war with Russia.

ALL THESE things do not indicate a weakening of American policy. They are, on the contrary, evidences of an increasing strength, efficiency, and lucidity.

Italy Faces 1948

By Sumner Welles

Communist Threat In Background

INTERNAL developments in Italy justify continued optimism.

A republican constitution has finally been adopted. The government has been greatly strengthened by the inclusion of the right-wing Socialists and the Republicans. The democratic coalition which Prime Minister de Gasperi now heads has an absolute majority in the National Assembly. The cabinet is politically far stronger than the Schuman cabinet in France, since it need not depend for support upon the extreme right. It has public opinion behind it. There is no doubt that the democratic parties could secure an overwhelming victory in fair national elections.

It was because of the government's popular strength that the revolutionary strikes called by the Communist Party failed so abjectly. The government acted with vigor and dispatch. The police and the army, which had not previously been tested, obeyed enthusiastically their instructions to maintain order. And most of the Italian workers, members though they are of Communist-dominated trade unions, were so desperately tired of Communist agitation and so anxious to work, that they refused to strike.

The chief cause for public conconfidence is that the De Gasperi cabinet is getting things done. Minister Einaudi's financial and economic program is succeeding. Inflation is being controlled. The prices of basic necessities have actually gone down. The devaluation of the lira has stimulated Italy's export trade. Employment is slowly increasing.

ITALY IS receiving about 75,000 tons of coal a month from the United States, 200,000 from the Ruhr, and some 60,000 from Poland. Industry can consequently operate at a satisfactory level. American stopgap relief will prevent acute distress until the end of March. If Italy can obtain the 400,000 tons of wheat from Argentina due under the recent credit, there need be no food crisis before next June.

Yet with all of this encouraging progress the situation of Italy is becoming increasingly precarious.

The creation of a Moscow-dominated Balkan federation is under way. The establishment of the Communist Greek guerilla "government" is the long-expected sign that the Soviet Union will stop at nothing short of actual hostilities in order to dominate the Mediterranean. If Greece is brought under Russian control Italy would inevitably become the next scene in the struggle.

There have as yet been only minor clashes along the new frontier between Italy and Yugoslavia. But Yugoslav provocations in the Adriatic have now commenced. The Yugoslavs lately seized 25 Italian fishing boats within sight of the Italian coast on the pretext that they had invaded Yugoslav waters. Feeling is beginning to run high. The unsettled status of Trieste invites a major "incident."

THE NEXT crisis will probably come during the Italian national elections. The tactics of the Communists are already foreshadowed. The Communist Party, which, notwithstanding Togliatti's self-incriminating denials, is largely financed from Soviet-controlled sources outside Italy, and which has by far the largest campaign chest of any Italian party, will use its funds lavishly to cut down the showing of the democratic parties.

On election day, the Communists will provoke local riots in order to prevent their opponents, and particularly the Italian women, from going to the polls. If the Communist leaders see that there is a democratic sweep which neither corruption, fraud, nor subversive activities can arrest, they will immediately claim that communism has been cheated. That will be the moment for revolution, provided Moscow believes the time to be then ripe for violence.

Yet the tide against communism is today so strong that, unless the Soviet government is prepared to support an armed rebellion by force, a coup d' etat would undoubtedly fail. Even were the Communist leaders to follow the example now set on Greece's borders, and establish a rebel "government" in some frontier city like Gorizia, such a government could not maintain itself save with Russian or Yugoslav military assistance.

THE ITALIAN people, in their great majority, will resist any attempt to impose a Communist dictatorship upon them.

Because of the help given them by the United States, the Italians are able to stage a magnificent comeback. If they were freed from the growing threat of Soviet intervention they could recover more rapidly than any other major nation of western Europe.

Winston Churchill has rendered democracy no greater service than his salutary warning last year that the Soviet rulers respect only force. In a world in which force is rampant, Soviet power can only be restrained by the Kremlin's knowledge that there exists a superior power, prepared and able to restrain it.

Where so many of our own political leaders are making their fundamental mistake is in their comforting, but wholly unrealistic, assumption that loans and relief alone can keep Europe free.

It is true that the only hope for European economic reconstruction lies in that form of cooperative undertaking which the European Recovery Program can bring into being. But of what value to the American people would such a start toward recovery prove to be if the Soviet Union is able, like Hitler, to crush democracy in one western European country after the other?

If Europe is to be saved, the European Recovery Program is indespensable. But what is equally urgent is that the Congress of the United States—whose voice is the only American voice that the Kremlin will heed in this presidential election year—declare that American force will, if necessary, be made available to enforce the provisions of the United Nations Charter, and to guarantee the independence of those European democracies like Italy, whose freedom has today become essential to American security.

Oil Probe of Major Companies To Be Asked by Sen. Johnston

By The Associated Press

A congressional investigation of the major oil companies for possible antitrust violations was proposed by Senator Johnston (D., S. C.) yesterday because, he said, there's apparently "a squeeze play going on to hurt the small independent dealers."

"It looks like the big oil companies are holding oil off the market so the people will be scared and they can run prices up," Johnston told reporters.

"If the big companies are doing this—as indicated in my State . . . prosecutions are in order."

Johnston said he would introduce today a resolution proposing the oil investigation. At his instigation, he said, the Department of Justice is checking on the distribution and storage of fuel oil.

Greek Shipments Challenged

The South Carolina Senator's investigation demand came as a Senate Small Business Subcommittee, delving into the domestic petroleum shortage problem, heard testimony that Greece is getting about 7000 barrels a day—one third of her requirements, from United States military sources under the American Foreign Aid program.

Senator Wherry (R., Neb.), chairman of the subcommittee, challenged the necessity for those shipment when domestic users are going short of oil.

"In reality," Wherry said, "the small businessman in Greece is getting a priority over the small businessman in America."

To him, he added, it seemed "grossly unfair."

Greece is due to get 450,000 tons of petroleum during the first six months of 1948, compared with 366,000 tons during the last half of 1947, Walter Wilds, State Department deputy coordinator of aid to Greece and Turkey, told the committee.

The 450,000 tons, he said, will include 215,000 tons of fuel oil. About one third of the over-all amount, he said, will have to be provided by American procurement sources.

Crude Stocks Decrease

The Bureau of Mines meanwhile reported that stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum in this country totaled 222,777,000 barrels on December 27, a net decrease of 144,000 barrels for the week.

The Senate Small Business Committee got its information about oil exports from Col. G. H. Vogel, executive officer of the Army-Navy Petroleum Board.

The 7000 barrels being supplied Greece, he testified, are included in the over-all military requirements of 342,600 barrels per day. This covers not only basic defense requirements but also petroleum for civilian use in occupied countries.

Asked by Wherry whether the military could divert some of its stocks for the next two months to help bolster scarce domestic supplies, Vogel said no.

Both the Army and Navy, he said, have minimum stocks on hand.

Urgent Appeals Cited

The shipments to Greece were started, Vogel told the committee, after the American mission to Greece sent urgent messages saying that Greek sources could not furnish the necessary oil.

In furnishing the petroleum, Vogel explained, the board was just carrying out the program set up for it by the State Department. Part of the joint chiefs of staff, the petroleum board is a petroleum clearing house for the armed forces.

Under the new program of winter aid to Italy, France, Austria and China, Vogel said, Italy is scheduled to get about six million dollars in petroleum products by April 1. He had no estimates on what the other countries might receive in similar shipments.

Steel Firms Give House Unit Names in Black Market Offers

By the United Press

Steel industry officials yesterday gave a House investigating committee the names of a dozen-odd persons who, they said, have offered to sell "black market" steel for as much as $250 a ton.

Chairman W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) said those on the list will be subpenaed to explain how and when they obtained their supplies to "unjustly enrich themselves."

The group, a Public Works Subcommittee, is investigating reports that "black market" operators now are doing a one-billion-dollar annual business. Macy said it has been estimated that 4 to 12 per cent of all steel production reaches "this vicious market."

Cooperation Pledged

The industry spokesman, representing the Nation's eight largest producers, pledged their full cooperation. But they emphasized their belief that black market operations divert very little steel from regular channels.

J. F. Smith, jr., sales manager for the Inland Steel Co., Chicago, said, in contrast to Macy's 4 to 12 per cent estimate, that "less than 1 per cent" of the industry's output actually reaches the black market.

C. H. Longfield, sales manager of the Youngstown (Ohio) Sheet & Tube Co., said he had heard "fantastic offers" of large quantities of steel available at premium prices, but that it never appeared. He said such offers were of a "daisy chain type" in that they actually were "extremely minor," but became inflated in size as they passed from seller to seller.

Offers Didn't Materialize

R. C. Todd, former vice president and now sales consultant of the American Rolling Mill Co., Middletown, Ohio, said he knew of offers for "large quantities of steel," but that "they never have materialized."

Similar testimony was given by Adam J. Hazlett, sales manager of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., Pittsburgh; Bennett S. Chapple, jr., sales manager of the United States Steel Corp., Pittsburgh; J. A. Henry, sales manager of the National Steel Corp. and the Weirton Steel Co., Pittsburgh; Norman W. Foy, general sales manager, Republic Steel Corp., Cleveland, and M. C. Schrader, assistant sales manager of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., Bethlehem, Pa.

Todd said the American Rolling Mills has refused to sell steel to four former customers who tried to resell it at premium prices. In some cases, he said, lots ranging from 25 to 100 tons were offered for $240 to $250 a ton.

"Our policy," he said, "is that we will not sell to anybody who allows the steel to be resold at such prices."

Foy said that Republic has turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation all of its own evidence on black market operations. His firm, he said, has been "troubled and disturbed" by the problem, but is "convinced" that only a small fraction is being distributed outside regular channels.

Sulky Races May Outdo Baseball

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

A FRIEND WANTS to bet trotting races at Laurel and Oxon Hill will outdraw night baseball hereabouts when and if the sulky people have suitable plants . . . the book, "The Nine Bad shots of Golf," by Jim Dante and Leo Diegel, makes no mention of one I made. Thanks to a 21-handicap, I came up to the final hole with a chance of winning a sportswriters' tournament. A local paper was running a series of "golf hints" at the time and I read that if you don't want to hit an obstacle some distance away, aim at it. I did—and struck the tree smack in the middle, the ball coming back over by head. Come to think of it, that wasn't a bad shot—but it ruined me . . . when Shirley Povich was in the South Pacific and I was pinchhitting for him, I wrote a piece about Joe Kuhel being the top managerial prospect on the Washington club. It can be done by lofting the cue ball and also by shooting slowly with follow English. The coin falls backward and it ridden out of the ring by the cue ball—or don't you shoot pool?

"I swear there isn't a coaching job open that I'm interested in and that I haven't been approached by any school," Head Football Coach Jim Tatum, of Maryland, said last night.

Tatum's comment came at the end of a two-hour conference between Dr. H. C. Byrd, university president, Walter Driskill, athletic director, and himself.

Tatum thus put to rest recent rumors which have linked his name with several coaching berths, particularly Navy and Auburn.

While Tatum himself definitely seems to be set to remain at Maryland, he will probably lose one, if not two, of his chief aides.

Driskill, who doubles as an assistant football coach, has been approached by his alma mater, Colorado University, to return as head coach. He has also been mentioned in connection with the WestJ Virginia job, recently vacated by Bill Kern.

Barclay Has Two Offers

Line Coach George Barclay, a teammate of Tatum's at North Carolina, received two offers, one from the University of Georgia, in Jacksonville last week.

Each job would be as assistant coach, but Barclay, if he makes a change, would probably do so only to become a head coach.

The Tatum - Driskill - Barclay coaching trio was formed when all three were in the Navy. Upon discharge, Tatum and Driskill went to Oklahoma University where Tatum served as head coach in 1946 and Driskill as assistant. Barclay returned to Dartmouth.

Barclay, All-American guard at North Carolina in 1934, also served as assistant coach at his alma mater, VMI and at Jacksonville Naval Air Station.

Parley Lasted Two Hours

Dr. Byrd, Tatum and Driskill devoted most of their two-hour parley to a "general discussion of the Maryland athletic situation," they said.

When Dr. Byrd called reporters into his office, however, he greeted them by saying, laughingly:

"We have a great announcement to make. Tatum and Driskill are resigning and I'm coming back as football coach."

This indicates their discussion may have been devoted to matters other than the "general athletic situation."

Quite a few moments, it was learned, were spent in going over plans for the new stadium and field house to be erected at College Park. Final plans are to be submitted "very soon" for the plant. The stadium, which has an outside

Maryland Trampled By Duke, 53 to 42

Duke Gymnasium, Durham, N. C., Jan. 5.—Maryland's Old Liners suffered their second straight loss at the hands of a North Carolina team here tonight when they bowed to Duke's Blue Devils, 53 to 42. North Carolina Tar Heels defeated the Old Liners, 70 to 46, at Chapel Hill last Saturday night.

Tonight's contest was a close affair for the first 30 minutes of play, but the Blue Devils were able to pull ahead in the final 10 minutes due to more reserve strength.

The Blue Devils moved into a quick 5-0 lead in the first two minutes of the scrap and at the five-minute mark were leading 9 to 3. At the first 10-minute mark, the Old Liners had closed the gap to 14-9 and were trailing by three points, 14-11, at the three-quarter mark of the first half. The Blue Devils were out front 23 to 18 at halftime.

In the second half Coach Flucie Stewart's club came within two points, 28-26, of overtaking the Blue Devils after seven minutes of playing time had elapsed, but that turned out to be their closest threat. Two quick baskets by Tommy Hughes sent the count to 32-26 and the Old Liners were never able to whittle the margin.

Duke enjoyed its biggest lead with four minutes left in the game, when it moved out front by 46 to 30.

Berardino signed to play with the Indians last week while es in Los Angeles.

American U. Loses by 64-55

Loyola University of Baltimore swept into the Mason-Dixon Basketball Conference lead at American University last night as it romped over the Eagles, 64-55, before a packed gym of over 1200 spectators.

Loyola's third straight triumph in the league provided American its first loss in four conference games. With the victory Loyola, defending Mason-Dixon titlist, brought its record for the season to 9 won and 3 lost.

Famed Maryland Harness Maker Dies at 83

Baltimore, Jan. 5 (AP).—William U. Beam, who made harness for many of Maryland's racing gentry for more than half a century, died at his home yesterday at the age of 83.

Beam was said never to bet on horses himself, which his family explains by the fact that he was a "good Methodist."

One of the few remaining craftsmen of handmade harness in this part of the country, he was active in his professional until an illness three months ago.

His customers included Alfred G. Vanderbilt, prewar president of Pimlico and master of Sagamore Farms; Merryman Black, John Bosley, Frank Bonsal and other Maryland trainers of thoroughbreds.

Beam, a native of Pikesville, was a Freemason and a member of the Order of Red Men. Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Margaret Constaintine Beam; two sons, Rupert M. and William E.; a daughter, Mrs. John B. Fromm; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildrwen.

Griff Gives Scarborough Hike in Pay

Rae Scarborough dropped in on Clark Griffith for a social call yesterday and wound up with a 1948 contract in his pocket for more money than he received last season.

"Rae was a much better pitcher than his 1947 win-loss record showed," Griffith said. "So we gave him an increase in pay as a little encouragement for next season."

Scarborough won 6 and lost 13 for the Nats last season, but he was among the upper half in earned-runs-allowed with an average of 3.41.

The 30-year-old right-hander from Mount Gilead, N. C., "probably had the hardest luck of any pitcher in the big leagues last year," Griffith said.

"He set some kind of a world record by pitching in four consecutive games in which the Nats were shut out. We got him one run over a stretch of 57 innings, which must be close to a record also."

Before the war, Scarborough was considered one of Washington's brightest young prospects but has not yet justified the exceptional promise he showed then.

He returned from the Navy in 1946 and won 7 while losing 11.

An injured wrist bothered him much of last season but toward the end he was starting regularly and showing flashes of his prewar form.

Yankees Give Henrich a Raise

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—The New York Yankees today announced the signing of Tommy Henrich, regular right fielder, to a 1948 contract. No mention of salary terms was made but it was believed the dependable outfilder received a pay boost.

Although the Yankees held up the announcement until today, Road Secretary Arthur Patterson said Henrich came to terms with General Manager George Weiss Friday after a 10-minute conference.

Georgetown's Trip Too Much Basketball

Special to The Washington Post

Chicago, Jan. 5.—If Washington basketball fans have been asking each other, "What's wrong with Georgetown?" they can't be blamed in view of the Hoyas six straight defeats.

There's a simple answer: Nothing. Or at least nothing that wouldn't go wrong with any team that tries to play seven of the country's leading collegiate quintets in two weeks, six of them on an 11-day road trip.

* * * * * *

The pace was just too much, Georgetown officials agreed today.

After winning the season's first six games, Georgetown dropped below a .500 record the quick way. It started with a 6-point loss to Santa Clara at home. That was forgiveable. Everybody runs into a bad second half once in a while.

But the bad halves continued as the Hilltoppers' post-Christmas trip started. Loyola of New Orleans took a 65-53 game, St. Louis University won by 63-58, Louisville zoomed to 69-52 victory, Western Kentucky romped by 58-37, and Loyola of Chicago coasted to a 53-41 victory. Then came tonight's loss to Notre Dame.

"The only game we should have lost," says Rome Schwagel, graduate manager of athletics, "was to that brilliant western Kentucky team. The others were our own fault.

"But you know how it is when you start losing. Mistakes come easy. Thin s break wrong. . . . Besides, we've been meeting teams a lot bigger than we are.

"Dissension on the club?" Schwagel laughed. "Sure, we've got that, too. But no more than any club that wants to win and doesn't. A train that ran three hours late between Louisville and Chicago didn't help anybody's temper. . ."

The five regulars say they're used too much, can't stand the pace set by fresh reserves of their opponents on such a long road trip.

The seven reserves complain about not enough action.

Thus everybody is unhappy, including the Washington supporters who thought they had the best team in Hoya history and are probably still asking "What's wrong with Georgetown?"

Irish Issue 7th Loss, 77-69

Notre Dame, Ind., Jan. 5.—Notre Dame's basketball team presented a well-balanced scoring machine here tonight to outrun Georgetown, 77 to 69, before a crowd of 3000 in the Notre Dame gymn. It was the Hoyas' seventh straight loss.

John Foley, 6-foot 4½-inch-sophomore who was moved into the starting lineup two weeks ago when John Brennan broke his arm, pushed 22 points through the nets to lead the Irish in scoring. Kevin O'Shea, ambidextrous guard, was close behind with 19 markers and Jim O'Halloran, starting his second game at forward, collared 15 points.

The Irish started fast and paced by O'shea moved into an early 14 to 8 margin at the end of five minutes. Foley began to find the mark with his favorite pivot shot and at the midway point in the first half, Notre Dame had moved into a 28-15 advantage.

Ray Corley, Hoya guard who played at Notre Dame when Georgetown Coach Elmer Ripley piloted the Irish in 1945, began to find the range with his long archers and by half time Georgetown had narrowed the margin to 39 to 35.

Georgetown stayed with the Irish for the first 10 minutes of the final half when they trailed only by 57 to 52, but Foley once again connected with his hook shots and O'Shea with long one-handers and with five minutes to go Notre Dame had moved into a 75 to 64 lead and held Georgetown at bay for the balance of the tilt.

Boaz Scores 36 For New Record

Marshall Boaz set a new Boys Club of Washington Christmas Basketball Tournament scoring record as he tallied 36 points to pace his Alexandria team to an 81-35 victory over Merrick yesterday at Georgetown Branch.

Scoring from all angles, Boaz, a former George Washington of Alexander star, caged 16 field goals and four fouls. His team meets Club Kay for the 135-pound title tomorrow at 8:30 p. m.

In the 120-pound semifinal, Eastern Branch routed Trinidad, 63-16 as Dave Keyes led the scorers with 14 points. Eastern will meet the Alexandria 120s tonight at 7:30 in the Georgetown Branch gym.

The Merrick 150-pounders gained the final round by defeating Alexandria, 56-44, and will meet Eastern for the title tomorrow evening at 8:30.

Tony Sinatra, Kamaroff Wrestle Here Tomorrow

Tony Sinatra (no relation to Singer Frank) will meet Russian Joe Kamaroff in a 30-minute preliminary to the Nanjo Singh-Don Lee wrestling match tomorrow night at Turner's Arena.

In one of the other preliminaries, Tony Coscenza, a concert pianist, pairs with Ace Freeman against Fred Corona and Pat Walsh in a two-man-team match. Billy Darrell and Ivan Mikaloff clash in the semifinal.

Colonial Win Streak of 10 Games Ended By 67 to 45

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 5.—North Carolina State's classy Wolfpack, defending champion of the Southern Conference, tonight gave convincing proof that it is the team to beat for the title by sounding thrashing previously undefeated George Washington, 67-45, before a capacity crowd at Frank Thompson Gymnasium.

Coach Everett Case's fast-breaking machine took the lead in the opening minutes of the contest, and at no time were the tall visitors from Washington able to make the issue a close one.

State threw up a tight defense which kept the Colonials away from the basket and controlled the play under the G. W. basket as Big Ed Bartels and Capt. Leo Katkaveck turned in their usual brilliant game on rebounds.

After the first 4½ minutes of action, the Wolfpack went out in front, 12-2, and from there on in it was merely a romp as the Colonials' 10-game winning streak came to an abrupt end. The contest was the first within the conference for the West Raleigh Hardwood Demons.

State took a 28-17 lead when the halftime intermission came around and after the rest period the Wolfpack quickly extended its margin to 42-40 with a barrage of baskets which left the scrapping Colonials bewildered.

George Washington, hoping to maintain its undefeated status and register its seventh consecutive conference triumph, battled right down to the bitter end. But the Colonials were no more effective against the terrific State attack than they were in losing a 70-47 decision to the Wolfpack in the semifinals of last season's tournament.

It was a team victory for the Wolfpack. Dick Dickey, the team's top scorer, added 13 points to his total and played a brilliant all-around game, but only had a two-point edge over center Paul Horvath, who made 11 points.

Johnny Moffat was the only Colonial to break into double figures as he sank three field goals and seven fouls for 13 points. Capt. Bill Cantwell, who was tied for the Southern Conference scoring lead before tonight's contest, was limited to four points.

Wedemeyer Signs Don Contract

Los Angeles, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—Herman Wedemeyer, star Hawaiian halfback at St. Mary's for the past four years, has been signed to a two-year professional football contract with the Los Angeles Dons of the All-America Conference, it was announced today.

Don Ameche, president of the Los Angeles team, made the announcement but refused to disclose terms. It was reported unofficially, however, that Wedemeyer would receive between $25,000 and $30,000 for the two-year term.

Arguments Still Rage

72% of Sports Editors Pick Michigan Over Irish

DETROIT, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—Michigan defeated Notre Dame by a wide margin today in a Detroit Free Press poll of sports editors who were asked to pick one team or the other as the greatest collegiate fotball unit of the past season.

Seventy-two per cent of the balloters voted in favor of the Western Conference and Rose Bowl champions. Notre Dame polled 23 per cent of the first place votes while the remaining five per cent declared that the two teams share the honors.

Free Press Sports Editor Lyall Smith explained the poll was taken "among top flight editors and football observers in each of the 48 states and the District of Columbia in an attempt to settle one of the most heated arguments in modern football history."

Most of those who voted in the poll felt that Michigan's superiority against three common foes who also played Notre Dame made the difference.

The Wolverines scored 167 points against Southern California, Pittsburgh and Northwestern while Notre Dame made only 104. On defense Michigan yielded only 21 points to the three teams and Notre Dame 32.

Typical comments supporting Michigan's claims:

R. G. Lynch, Milwaukee Journal—"I saw Michigan play Minnesota and Illinois and also saw Notre Dame defeat Army. If Michigan played Notre Dame I would take the Wolverines."

Bus Ham, The Washington Post—"Michigan for me. All season long we rate teams on comparative scores. Michigan-USC and Notre Dame-USC provided a direct comparison."

Paul Zimmerman, Los Angeles Times—"Michigan. This team has greater speed, deception in attack and elusiveness in its backfield talent."

Chauncey Burden, Richmond Times Dispatch—"I would pick Michigan as one of the great teams of all times."

Notre Dame proponents sent in comments like this:

Jack Carberry, Denver Post—"Notre Dame. Both are among the great in history but I rate Notre Dame's forward wall capable of stopping Michigan's razzle dazzle with Johnny Lujack being the difference in scoring."

John Carmichael, Chicago Daily News—"Notre D e all the way. The line mak s the difference and Johnny Lujack is still Johnny Lujack."

Bill Fox, Indianapolis News—"A draw. An unsatisfied appetite is a blessing."

Sports Writers Pick Louis To Beat Walcott Next Time

(This is the first of a series of year-end stories, based on a poll of sports editors. Others of the series will be moved periodically.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (AP).—Joe Louis will defeat Jersey Joe Walcott next June, probably by a knockout, in the opinion of over 80 per cent of the sports editors from coast to coast who participated in the annual year-end poll conducted by the Associated Press.

Although the bout has not been signed by the Twentieth Century Sporting Club or any other promoter, most of the writers assumed that the veteran Jersey battler who came so close to dethroning the champ would get the call.

Currently Walcott is holding out for a larger share of the gate from the Twentieth Century for the outdoor fight. Philadelphia is the latest city to put in a bid.

Only five writers named other heavyweights. Three thought Gus Lesnevich, the light heavyweight king, would be the foe. One tabbed Joey Maxim as an opponent and another said he thought Joe would fight "somebody he can beat." No names were mentioned.

A little over a month ago there would have been no point to the Associated Press question, "Whom do you think Joe Louis will meet in June and what will be the result?" There had been little cause for concern about the result of a Louis bout for so long, that the name of the opposition had not mattered.

The Walcott bout in Madison Square Garden, early in December, changed all that. Although Louis retained his crown by a split decision, with Referee Ruby Goldstein voting for the challenger, there was considerable disagreement with the verdict. Now the date and name of opponent are awaited with interest.

Most of the editors took Louis at his word that the June defense would be his last before retirement although a few said they thought Joe would win and then decide to take on at least one more battle.

Approximately half of the editors answering the query, believed Louis would knock out Walcott in their next meeting. The guesses ran all the way from four rounds to "inside 10." The sixth appeared most popular.

Cardozo Wins Track Titles Without Track

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

MY CURIOSITY about Cardozo high school's fine track teams had reached the point where I had to go out and see what makes the Cardozo boys tick.

So I dropped in on the smallest of the Washington Negro highs out at Ninth and Rhode Island, nw., to visit with Sylvester (Sally) Hall who has coached Cardozo to one national, one Eastern and three South Atlantic interscholastic championships.

What I found out made my admiration of the Cardozo boys all the greater. They're not only fine athletes but they're overcoming inadequate facilities.

Cardozo has no outdoor track, and its indoor track consists of four narrow first floor corridors in the school building. The longest straightaway is 50 yards.

On this straightaway, part concrete, part wood, Hall developed Bill Mathis, the University of Illinois' sprinting star, and 17-year old Marcellus (Googie) Boston, one of the top schoolboy prospects in the Nation.

Six years ago, Hall accepted the track position at Cardozo in the face of the lack of facilities. Interest had lagged. It was the "fourth" major sport, trailing football, basketball and baseball.

Hall decided to plunge into his job. He was permitted to line up out-of-town meets, hold special track assemblies, conduct a huge intramural program.

* * * *

HE CALLED practice earlier than usual in 1943, during the middle of December. "His "popularizing" movement of the year before paid off. Some 30 boys reported, and stuck it out.

"I had to use a little psychology to keep the boys working out," Hall said. "The first thing I did was give them a pep talk on the importance as members of the team. Then I told them their duties as individuals. We were able to borrow the Howard University track every once in a while.

"And by 1944, we were able to send five men up to Providence and win the eastern scholastic title."

"The boys are so willing, conscientious and well trained now, that I could take a two-week vacation and be confident that when I came back, they'd be ready to go into a big meet," Hall says. "They know exactly what to do."

Besides their winning of regional titles, the Cardozo trackmen have set interscholastic records for the 60-yard dash and 960-yard relay in Madison Square Garden, and for the 100, 220 and 440 in Providence, R. I.

HOW HAVE the Cardozo boys learned to run on the banked big-time indoor tracks?

"For this, we have Catholic University to thank," says Hall. "CU has a banked track similar to the one in Madison Square Garden, and lets us use it once a year. From that one practice, the boys get the feel of taking the turns.

Mathis, the 60-yard intercollegiate champ, is Hall's product. But he expects Boston, who graduates from Cardozo in June, to equal Mathis. Boston has already been clocked in 9.8 over the 100. He licked Mathis and several other collegiate flashes over the 100 in the invitational meet at the Armory last Saturday.

Two other youngsters are showing promise at Cardozo. They are 16-year-old Cubby Perry, brother of Aaron Perry, local welterweight boxer, and 15-year-old Joe Walker, both freshmen.

Perry is one of the best hurdlers in the city despite the fact that he has only one hurdle, borrowed from Howard U., over which to practice. Walker, despite his youth, has already been clocked in 10.1 over the 100-yard distance.

Ben Hogan Wins Los Angles Open by Shooting Record 275

Mangrum Finishes 4 Strokes Back

By Bob Myers
Post Reporter

Los Angeles, Jan. 5 (AP).—Ben Hogan, conquering a dense fog and a belated challenge by former National Open Champion Lloyd Mangrum, captured the $10,000 Los Angeles Open today.

Hogan, firing his fourth successive sub-par round, posted a 67 for a total score of 275—five strokes under the record 280 for the Riviera Country Club which he shot in winning the annual event last year.

The victory was Hogan's third in the 22-year history of this mid-winter links fixture.

A gallery of nearly 9000, bringing the four-day tournament attendance to more than 40,000—another record—saw Hogan beat out Texas-born Mangrum by four strokes.

Mangrum, who threw a scare into bantamweight Ben midway in today's final 18 holes, posted a 67 for 279 for the par 35-36—71 course, scene of the National Open next summer.

Lew Worsham, National Open champion from Washington, D. C., finished with a 74 for a four-day total of 298. Baltimore's Otto Greiner wound up at 299.

Hogan's win was worth $2000, while Mangrum as runner-up collected $1400.

Third place, with a purse of $1000, went to Ellsworth Vines of Pasadena, the former amateur and professional tennis champion, whose 72 gave him a total of 283.

Tied at 284 were Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., with a 68 today, and Ed Furgol of Pontiac, Mich., who had a 73.

Penn State Gridmen Kicked At Navy Quarters and Chow

State College, Pa., Jan. 5 (AP).—Bob Higgins, Penn State football coach, admitted today his players were "unhappy" about being quartered at the Dallas (Tex.) Naval Air Station for their Cotton Bowl game New Year's Day but he flatly denied reports of team dissension.

Despite repeated gripes about eating Navy chow and living on a Navy reservation, Higgins said, the Nittany Lion squad went into the game against Southern Methodist "with a determination to win and after a bad start played commendable football."

"Naturally we hated to get only a 13 to 13 tie, but our failure to win was not related to pregame gripes about things foreign to football," Higgins told a reporter.

Jordan C. Ownby, president of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association, said at Dallas that Penn State coaches and players made "no official complaint" regarding their Navy living quarters.

"We were grateful to the Navy for furnishing these quarters, which I will say were better than students have at college these days and better than I had," Ownby asserted.

The Naval Base quarters were obtained, Ownby pointed out, because State had Negroes on its squad.

Higgins declared that from his viewpoint the Texas facilities were ideal.

"We had a fine field, tackling and charging dummies and were treated well," the Nittany Lion mentor explained, adding he had warned his team prior to its Cotton Bowl acceptance that the trip would be no picnic and would involve hard work.

Asked about reports players had jumped the Naval Reservation fences to get out when guards refused to pass them, Higgins said he had been informed of such attempts, but asserted it did not harm "and could be expected of college boys."

"My players are mostly veterans and they disliked, as they put it, 'being back in service,'" Higgins said.

Dear Folks: At Gulfstream

Tom Crowler of Richmond, Va., has gone in the horse business in style by purchasing four horses from Ed Crump. The Virginian's stable includes Newtown, Lady Geeganna, Dolly Zax and Value Mark. They will be seen in action around Maryland in the spring. We missed a hunch bet in the $50,000 race at Santa Anita last Saturday. Mrs. Rabbit was the winner. Who couldn't bet on a filly by that name, especially now that it is leap year? Jockey Ruperto Donoso has returned to this country after his annual winter visit to his native South America. Business, while on the improve, isn't so hot at Gulfstream which has only nine days to go. Hialeah will do OK with the cream of the Florida dates, but Tropical, which is the last meeting, looks like its in for some dull afternoons. The heavy dough just ain't around. The older riders are having trouble with the apprentices at Gulfstream. The top four among the saddle pilots are Harold Featherston, W. M. Cook, Jack Turner and Peter Gifford —all "bug" boys. Turner rode both ends of the daily double Saturday and Cook turned the same trick on the Monday card.

Sulky Races Are Growing

town, opens this week and is advertised as "Sunshine Park." . . . the race track boys refer it it affectionately as "Shaeshine Park."

I WAS TALKING to a Washington Caps' rooter the other night and I asked how he thought Nate Holman in his prime would fare in present pro basketball. "He wouldn't get a shot a night," he replied . . . Did you know that a racing record set at the old Bennings (D. C.) track was broken 24 years later at Marlboro. Jockey Walter Miller, who, by the way, holds the world's record for riding 388 winners in a single year, piloted eight straight winners at Bennings in 1906—the last five races one day and the first three the next. This mark stood until 1930 when Albert Adams, a 17-year-old boy, won nine straight in two days. The first jockey to ride every winner on the program was James Lee, a Negro boy, who got home first in all six races at Churchill Downs in 1907 . . . What is the most famous tree in Washington? The one just outside the turnstile at Griffith Stadium. Isn't that where everybody meets everybody? . . . I don't mind Bassin's Restaurant putting my picture on the wall but why do I have to be in No. 1 post position, nearest the bar? Maybe they figure my likeness will drive a lot of guys to drink.

Kramer Wins Again, Now Even With Riggs

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 5 (AP).—Big Jack Kramer played brilliant tennis Sunday night to overpower Bobby Riggs, 6—4, 7—5, before 3755 fans in Toledo's new sports arena.

The triumph enabled the former amateur champion and Davis Cup hero to pull even with the king of the professionals at three matches apiece.

Ten Games Slated for Highs Today

Five of the interhigh basketball teams which open their league season Friday at the Armory face brisk warmups as part of today's 10-game slate.

Central's Vikings make their season's debut by entertaining Chamberlain and defending interhigh titleholder Calvin Coolidge is host to St. John's in the feature games, both beginning at 3:30 p. m.

Western plays at Hyattsville, Maryland University's Frosh at Eastern and Gonzaga at Anacostia in the other games involving public high teams.

Central is rated one of the dark horses in the coming race. Facing their first competition of the new season will be Viking holdovers Jimmy Pantos, Hal Sponsler, Ross Keith and a promising newcomer, Al Stringer.

Chamberlain boasts several former interhigh stars, including former Centralite's Gus Baroutas and Johnny Koustenis and former Easterner Angelo Karadimos.

With only Bobby Rohr and Tommy Boyle back from last year's championship Coolidge team, the Colts aren't considered a good bet to finish in the interhigh first division. They face a strong foe in St. John's, which has been heralded as the best in the District. Racing the Johnnies are Jack George, Al Martins and Red Weaver.

Today's Games

Survivors of Crash That Killed 10 Children

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

BOBSLED TRAGEDY—Two of the three youngsters who survived after a fast passenger train had struck a tractor-drawn bobsled loaded with children, near Archbold, Ohio. Janice Wyse, 7 (left), was in serious condition yesterday at nearby Wauseon Hospital. Her father, driving the tractor, and her brother, John, 13, on the rear of the sled, leaped clear of the crash. Shirley Grieser, 9, sister of four of the dead children, has a broken leg

New Ga. Voting Laws Aim Of Supporters, Talmadge Says

Atlanta, Jan. 5 (AP).—Voter-qualification laws administered so as to bar Negroes from eletcions in the South, may become the last barricade of "white supremacy" advocates,

Georgia's leading exponent of white rule, Herman Talmadge, acknowledged today that this would be attempted. He said it was the only avenue left open by a recent ruling of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, invalidating the South Carolina "white primary."

Talmadge, widely regarded as a spokesman for white rule, said voter-qualification laws probably would be enacted with intent to exclude Negroes from franchise. He said he thought this was proper, even though registrars would bar Negroes while allowing illiterate whites to vote.

Alabama already has a voter-qualification law It is the so-called Boswell amendment to the State constitution,, requiring Alabama voter sto be able to "understand and explain" any section of the Federal Constitution to the satisfaction of local registrars. A court challenge is being prepared by Negro leaders.

South Carolina sought to bar Negroes from its eletcions by divorcing primaries from State control. It made the Democratic Party an exclusive club, open to white person sonly. The United States Court of Appeals ruled this unconstitutional.

Good News For Folks Who Suffer From

✓ STOMACH GAS
✓ ACID INDIGESTION

Do you feel bloated and miserable after every meal, taste sour, bitter food? If so, here is how you may get blessed relief from this nervous distress.

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Voters to End Legislative Dispute in Ala.

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 5 (AP).—Alabama voters will write an answer tomorrow to one of the most tempestuous political desputes in the State's history—a wrangle which has brought the governor and legislators to the stump campaigning against each other.

The issue is a proposed constitutional amendment which would let the legislature call itself into special session on petition of at least three-fifths of the members. Under the present system the legislators can convene themselves only for impeachment.

Tomorrow's special election will climax two months of name-calling in which Gov. James E. Folsom has charged senate and house members with seeking to "hogtie" him and with legislating for the benefit of a "privileged" few instead of the entire State.

Gun-Waving Man Gets Seat Quickly On Crowded Train

John Arthur Noel, 59, of Fredericksburg, Va., has found one sure way to find a seat on a crowded train. But the idea probably won't be widely adopted. For yesterday, Noel was haled into Fairfax County Police Court for trying it.

Noel boarded a Fredericksburg-bound train in Union Station Saturday night, found no seats, then pulled a .25-caliber pistol from his pocket and emptied a car quicker than you could say Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad detective.

In Fairfax Police Court, Judge Harry L. Carrico yesterday found Noel guilty of resisting arrest, carrying a concealed weapon and drunk and disorderly conduct. Noel paid the drunkenness fine of $10, but appealed jail sentences totaling 60 days on the two other counts.

Brazilian Police Clash With Reds as Ouster Vote Nears

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 5 (AP).—Police in a number of Brazilian cities clashed today with Communists as the Chamber of Deputies neared a vote on a bill to remove all Communists from elective offices.

Red mass meetings were broken up in Duque Decaxias, Niteroi, Sao Paulo, Recife and Salvador.

President Eurico Gaspar Dutra's government has outlawed the Communist Party and broken relations with Russia. It also is sponsoring the bill to remove Communist office holders. The measure already has passed the senate.

What Am I Saying! — By Frank Morgan

The late Marie Wressler, once remarked: "There's no vice like advice!"

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Klutz

Procedure Delays Engraving Bureau Per Diem Raises

GOVERNMENT GOSSIP

THAT pay raises for per diem employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing will be delayed for several weeks. A new procedure requires the unions that petition for higher salaries to produce facts and figures to back up their demands. The bureau has returned all general requests for supporting data. The unions are seeking pay raises that range from 15 to 20 per cent. After they are all in, formal hearings will be held by the Treasury wage board—

THAT the anuual and sick leave study being conducted by the Senate Appropriations Committee definitely will not propose a reduction of leave benefits. This committee will deal only with the cost of leave. It will put it up to the Civil Service Committee to propose any change in the leave system—

THAT William H. Draper, jr., is anxious to resign as Undersecretary of the Army to return to his New York investment banking house. Secretary Royall has urged him to stay on for another six months. Draper served with the Army occupation force in Germany before he was made Undersecretary—

THAT the Navy soon will issue a new order to handle its loyalty cases. The order will give an accused employe the right to appear personally beforet the Secretary's appeal board—

THAT the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board has before it the first employe appeal. The case involves a Navy employe. However, the case may be thrown out by the board, since Navy officials say the case against the worker started before the board was created—

THAT General Accounting Office will stand pat on its annual leave decision which caused hundreds of Federal employes to lose annual leave as of December 31 War Assets has requested GAO to reconsider its ruling. The decision involves only those employes who had more than 60 days of leave and did not take all they earned last year—

THAT a change in the make-up of the Civil Service Commission is reported to have been discussed in official quarters. It's whispered that Harllee Branch, a member of the Civil Aeronautics Board, will be transferred to the commission. However, Branch says he knows nothing about the report and that he expects to remain with CAB for the time being—

THAT the Atomic Energy Commission will seek a big deficiency appropriation from Congress to carry on atomic research. And that the Internal Revenue Bureau will ask Congress for a record deficiency—about 700 million dollars to be used to refund excess tax payments. The House Appropriations Committee forced the cut in refunds through Congress last year. It gambled and lost on approval of a tax reduction bill.

NOTES: The executive council of CIO's left-wing United Public Workers will meet Monday in New York City . . . Dr. James Boyd, acting director of the Bureau of Mines, will lecture tomorrow night at the University of Maryland. The public is invited . . . Joseph M. Hanson, poet and historian, has retired as custodian of Interior's Manassas, Va. National Battlefield Park. He will now devote full time to writing.

DECLINE: The number of civilian workers on the Federal payroll both here and abroad dropped below the two million mark in November for the first time since 1941. In this country, the number of full time civilians slumped to around 1,750,000.

The report on Federal employment was made yesterday by the Byrd Economy Committee. The committee said that half of the agencies had reported employment increases during November. The total decline for November was 47,145.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES: About 600 of the 3175 persons here who applied for positions of electrician, plumber, carpenter, and painter have been declared eligible by Civil Service. More than half the eligibles are veterans . . . A competitive test will be announced soon for pharmacists to serve with the Veterans Administration here. The starting salary is $4902.

CAREER: Civil Service has given Federal agencies greater freedom in firing nonveteran war service and temporary employes in order to hire laid-off career workers. Hereafter, this will be the practice:

First to go will be war service and temporaries (nonveterans) who do not have an eligible rating on a current Civil Service register, and then nonveteran war service and temporary employes who have passed competitive tests may be fired.

In other words, the agencies won't need to fire these types of employes in order of their retention preference credits. But the commission emphasized that the new policy covers only firings to open up jobs for displaced career people. The change will make it easier for the agencies to hire career workers.

Milk Price Probe Gets Under Way In D. C. Area

Justice Department Attorneys Present Early Findings to Special Grand Jury

A probe of Washington area food prices, starting with milk costs, was launched yesterday by a special grand jury.

Four attorneys from the Justice Department's antitrust division made a preliminary presentation to the grand jury of the Government's charges.

John F. Baecher, Robert H. Winn, George B. Haddock and John A. Skiles, appointed to handle the case, spent about an hour closeted with the grand jury.

The special jury is the one which is also handling the investigation of freight car costs.

Starting with milk prices in this area, the Government will seek a grand jury probe into a wide variety of food items, said Baecher, who is chief aide to Assistant Attorney General John F. Sonnett.

Most area dairies and the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association have been subpenaed in the antitrust proceedings which will seek to determine if they have conspired to regulate prices.

Falls Church Drive Planned On Vandalism

Steps to combat mounting juvenile vandalism and delinquency in Falls Church will be mapped at a meeting of Falls Church residents tomorrow night.

Plans for the meeting, to be held at the home of Mrs. Mason Barr, 49 Ravenwood lane, were announced as Fairfax County police investigated numerous acts of vandalism attributed to a group of about 25 teen-agers on New Year's Eve.

According to Mrs. Barr, the youths damaged 10 automobiles parked near the scene of a New Year's Eve party for high school students. Equipment was removed from the cars, tires deflated, mud and dirt put in gasoline tanks and the ignition systems in several were destroyed.

Tomorrow night's meeting is open to local and county police, school principals and affected parents. Plans will be discussed for more rigid police supervision of the area's juveniles and for a more extensive juvenile recreational program.

Another meeting on teen-age recreation in the Falls Church area has been set for Thursday night by the Teen Canteen, a group of boys and girls who organized last summer to improve the town's recreational facilities.

Three Youths Held In Larceny Charges

Three Greater Washington youths accused of breaking into 150 to 200 cars here were bound to the grand jury yesterday on grand larceny charges.

A fourth youth, 16, was ordered held for Juvenile Court action on charges of looting.

Held for grand jury action by Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson on bonds of $1600 each were: Murray Chaikin, 21, 104 Allegheny ave., Takoma Park, Md.; William H. Minitz, 20, of 21 Quincy st. nw., and Albert C. Marcellino, 20, of 3815 14th st. nw.

The youths also must stand trial in Municipal Court January 16 on petit larceny charges growing out of a series of cab break-ins in Northwest Washington.

Hearing Today On Beltsville Trolley Line

Abandonment of the Beltsville-Branchville, Md., trolley line will be protested before the Maryland Public Service Commission at the Munsey Bldg., Baltimore, beginning at 10:30 a. m. today.

Representatives of civic groups and municipal officials from the affected area are expected to appear at the hearing. Capital Transit Co. requested permission to abandon the line in November.

Louis B. Arnold, Washington attorney with offices in the Transportation Building, has been retained as counsel by a group of citizens in the area. Communities directly served by the line include Beltsville, Hollywood, Daniels Park, Branchville, and the Agriculture Department horticultural station.

Boy Santa Claus Visited Early Dies of Leukemia

Solomons, Md., Jan. 6 (AP).—Kenneth W. Langley, 6, who got a special Christmas leave to go home from the hospital and had his presents early in case he couldn't wait for Santa Claus, died today of leukemia.

Johns Hopkins Hospital termed his case hopeless and sent him home before Christmas. Santa Claus made him a special pre-Christmas visit December 23, and he got everything he asked for—including an electric train.

Man Charging Police Beating Gets Legal Aid; Woolfolk's Dismissal Urged in Bribe Case

Private Found Guilty Of Agreeing to 'Fix' Ticket for Parking

The Police Trial Board yesterday of recommended the dismissal of Pvt. Peter C. Woolfolk of the Thirteenth Precinct after finding him guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and of accepting a bribe.

The policeman, who is married and has two children, denied at a hearing last Friday that he had taken a $5 bribe for agreeing to have a parking ticket "fixed." He asserted the $5 was for collateral which he was to post on behalf of the man who gave it to him.

The board agreed that the papers in the case would be turned over to the office of the District Attorney for possible criminal action against both Woolfolk and George W. Brooks, complainant in the Trial Board action, who contradicted most of his own sworn charges at the hearing.

Brooks, a garage operator at 950 Barry pl. nw., complained initially to police that Woolfolk accepted his $5 to "fix" a parking ticket. He later told the Trial Board he made the bribe charges because he was "mad" at finding tickets on four cars he had parked near the garage.

Private Woolfolk has had minor charges against him on three prior occasions, appearing once before the Trial Board and twice before the police major. The Trial Board previously fined him 50 on charges of being late in arriving at a school crossing to which he was assigned.

Lieut. Albert B Clark and Sergt. Philip L. Abel, his superiors at the Thirteenth Precinct, testified Friday that Woolfolk had admitted he took the $5 from Brooks on December 20 for agreeing to have the parking ticket "fixed."

Private Woolfolk, who lives at 850 19th st. se., has been on the force more than seven years. He was suspended December 20 pendind disposition of the current case.

The Trial Board recommendation goes to the District Commissioners for final action. The Commissioners may accept, reject or amend the board findings.

Blow, Webb Classes Draw More Pupils

Classes at Blow and Webb annexes to Browne Junior High School yesterday drew more students than at any time since the parent-sponsored strike started December 3.

Leaders of the Negro parents' group aiding the strike had asked that it be made 100 per cent effective on reopening day.

Attendance figures showed 182 students out of 552 in classes during the morning shift at the annex buildings and 91 out of 575 present in the afternoon.

Legal efforts by the parent group to prevent the Board of Education from assigning their children to the Blow and Webb buildings also have failed.

A suit for injunction filed in behalf of Browne students has been dismissed in District Court at the request of Leonard Hayes, attorney for the plaintiffs.

Hayes said he asked for dismissal because parents by keeping children out of class failed to take his advice.

All phases of the strike which began two days after the board transferred Blow and Webb from white elementary schools to annexes to relieve overcrowding at Browne will be discussed at a meeting of the board's committee on buildings and grounds at 4 p. m. today.

The office of Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, said that he will report on demands by the parents that either Eastern High or Eliot Junior High be transferred to use by Negro children or that the board return students to part-time schedules at the main Browne building.

20,000 Sign Plea Backing Houston For D. C. Board

Petitions bearing an estimated 20,000 signatures, backing Charles H. Houston, Washington attorney, for District Commissioner, were presented yesterday to Philleo Nash, a representative of President Truman.

The Rev. Robert M. Williams, pastor of Asbury Methodist Church and chairman of the committee, said Negro churches of Washington heartily indorsed Houston, former vice dean of the Howard University Law School and former member of the Board of Education.

Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, dean of Howard Medical School, said the group favored Houston not because he was a Negro, but because of his "unusual capabilities."

Mother Discovers Son 44, Dead in Bedroom

Claude Lenoir, 44, of 4726 8th St. nw., was found dead in his bed shortly before noon yesterday by his mother, Mrs. Laura Allen.

Police said she had heard her son move around upstairs as late as 10 a. m. He had been suffering from heart trouble, according to police. A former machinist, he had not worked for several months, they said.

An autopsy will be performed at the District morgue today to determine cause of death.

Accuser of Police Forfeits Collateral on Drunk Charge

Manley W. Kilgore, National Institute of Health executive, yesterday "reluctantly" forfeited $10 collateral he had put up on drunk and disorderly charges.

He said he took such action rather than to continue "an unpromising, single-handed crusade" of his charges of police brutality in his arrest.

Municipal Court, where the 37-year-old chief fiscal and budget officer was slated for trial on the drunk and disorderly charges, yesterday, was notified of the forfeiture by District Corporation Counsel.

Kilgore, of 4201 S. Four Mile Run dr., Arlington, had publicly aired complaints he was "kicked and mishandled" and unjustly arrested after being forcibly detained as a material witness to an accident early December 24.

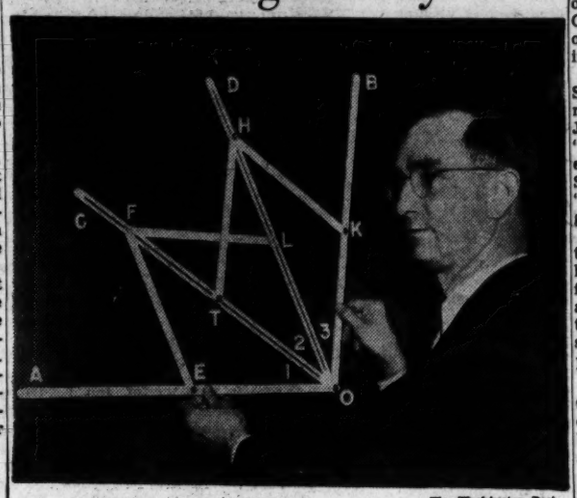
Through his attorney, J. Grahame Walker, Kilgore issued a statement explaining his forfeiture as "not an admission of guilt" but "a realization I am without witnesses."

The statement expressed satisfaction that his case, "through press reports, photographs and an editorial in The Washington Post" had rendered service to the public. He also pleaded "financial drain," "a chronic intestinal condition" and "extreme pressure of my responsibilities at my office."

Kilgore was taken to the police stationhouse at 42d and Albemarle sts. nw., after a taxicab in which he was riding struck and injured Mrs. Pauline Vlahos, 36, of 4341 Ellicott st. nw., at Wisconsin ave. and Ellicott st. nw. She suffered a broken leg.

Kilgore admitted he had had one alcoholic drink and denied emphatically that he was drunk.

D. C. Man Invents Device To Trisect Angle Easily



The Washington Post

MR. EUCLID SHOULD SEE IT—Alton P. Hall of 2200 U pl. se. shows his "trisectoscope," which mechanically trisects angles. His explanation of its operation: A O B is the angle, which can be varied in size by moving the arms apart. E and K are fixed points. F T H andK are points which slide in the grooves of C O and D O. E F L O and T H K O are equilateral parallelograms (rhombuses), of which F O and H O remain the respective diagonals. From the theorem (a diagonal of a rhombus bisects its angles), angles 1 and 3 equal angle 2, making all three equal

By Al Manola
Post Reporter

There's a new, quicker look to the ancient problem of trisecting an angle.

It comes from Alton P. Hall, 43-year-old Washington railway mail clerk and his invention, the "trisectoscope."

Hall says his device will trisect an angle mechanically within reasonable limits of accuracy and will do it in a matter of moments.

He brought the "trisectoscope" to The Washington Post yesterday after reading a Page 1 story about a Chicagoan who trisected an angle in a minute.

The Chicagoan, Charles O. Johnston, a mechanical engineer, used a ruler and a drafting compass. But University of Chicago mathematicians said Johnston didn't follow the rules laid down by the Greek mathematician, Euclid, who said it couldn't be done.

Doesn't Refute Euclid

Hall, who lives with his wife and two children at 2200 U pl. se., doesn't claim to have solved the problem that baffled Euclid. But he says he has invented a simple way of trisecting an angle mechanically.

His "trisectoscope" consists of four long rulers hinged together at one end, two short rulers fastened to the four long rulers and a crosspiece fastened to the two center rulers.

As the two outer rulers are pulled apart to make an agle, the short rulers and cross pieces slide on the two inner rulers, keeping them equidistant from each other and from the two outer rulers.

The first trisectoscope" was invented by Hall in 1942 as the result of a dream, he said.

"I dreamed of a right angle one night," he declared. "In my dream I opened and shut the angle like a fan. I thought about it the next morning and quit eating in the middle of my breakfast to go down to my workshop to try the idea. I finished it that day."

Used Venetian Blind

Hall used slats from a Venetian blind to construct the "trisectoscope."

"I'm going to make one about 10 feet long as soon as I get the materials," Hall declared.

Hall taught mathematics for 11 years in the Monroe (N. C.) and Burlington (N. C.) high schools before coming to Washington eight years ago. He first became acquainted with the problem at the University of North Carolina where he graduated as a mathematics major in 1929.

"The problem of trisecting a plane angle by means of a straight edge and compass is one of the four problems of antiquity," Hall said.

He listed the others as the "duplication of the cube," the exact computation of pi" and "squaring the circle." (We won't go into those.)

Ex-Assistant U. S. Attorney Agrees To Take Case Free

With unemployment compensation only to finance him, Peter J. Stathis, 25, of 3228 Park pl. nw., set out yesterday to press his complaint of police brutality—and found he had friends.

The United States Attorney's Office heard his story of alleged unprovoked assault by a Washington policeman, and scheduled informal hearing on the case for 2:30 p. m., Thursday, before Assistant United States District Attorney Evan T. Davis.

Former Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold interrupted his own lucrative law practice to hear Stathis' plea, and agreed to help.

Krouse Accepts Case

Former Assistant District Attorney Allen J. Krouse conferred with Arnold, and agreed to take the unemployed tilesetter and railroad worker's case, without pay. He will defend Stathis today in Municipal Court on police charges of disorderly conduct.

Police Superintendent Maj. Robert J. Barrett, unsolicited by the complainant, promised "complete and thorough" police investigation of Stathis' complaint, and directed Capt. Walter Storm, commanding officer of No. 10 Police Precinct, to investigate and report back.

It was in No. 10 precinct that Stathis was arrested late Saturday night by Police Pvt. Jerome J. Jones, who officially reported he "had to use my service baton to effect and maintain my arrest" (of Stathis). He charged Stathis with "disorderly conduct (indecent language)."

Stathis told Teh Washington Post that the incident occurred after he volunteered to clean up trash for a friend, Mrs. Mae Q. Davis, and her daughter, Diane, 14, at their home, 650½ Newton pl. nw., shortly before midnight, Saturday.

Blow From Billy Charged

Stathis said he was grabbed by the shoulder, spun around and hit over the eye with the policeman's billy after the policeman "resented" a remark he made.

Pvt. Jones' version of the injury was: "Stathis fought me off when I attempted to catch hold of him."

Said Thurman Arnold yesterday:

"The kid came in and told me about it and I just had to help him out. I'd have taken his case myself but I'm leaving for Chicago.

"The whole thing is fantastic and something has to be done about it. It's unthinkable that a policeman can come into someone's house at that hour of the night and force someone to clean up a little trash and stand guard while it's being done."

Stathis denied using "indecent language." He said Diane witnessed the whole incident and would testify for him.

Grand Jury Aids Drafted By Fall Panel

Five procedural aids for future grand juries were suggested yesterday by the District of Columbia fall grand pury upon completing its three-months' term.

Robert D. Coffman, editor of the Potomac Electric Power Co.'s employes magazine and jury foreman, handed the jurors' suggestions to Presiding Judge David A. Pine.

The jurors were said to have suggested the court, rather than the District Attorney, give grand juries their instructions in procedural matters, that a copy of the grand juror's oath be provided for each venireman, and that a pamphlet be prepared for the grand juries giving an outline of court procedures, legal terms and the duties of the grand jury.

Judge Pine said the suggestions would be considered at the next term meeting of judges.

In discharging the jury, both Judge Pine and Assistant United States Attorney John Diamond, who was in charge of it, commented that it was one of the most conscientious, painstaking, and efficient juries to serve in recent years.

Pastor Voices Optimism Over Church Merger

Optimism over the proposed merger of the Congregational-Christian and Evangelical and Reformed bodies was voiced last night by Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer.

Dr. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, and chairman of the executive committee of the Congregational General Council—the ruling body—addressed a laymen's meeting at First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw.

The speaker emphasized that the two denominations have already drawn up a "Basis of Union" and that delegates to the General Council voted 490 to 90 in favor of a merger, in an unofficial poll conducted by mail. However, official action must be taken at a General Council meeting in Oberlin, Ohio, at the end of this June.

The planned merger would make a united church of approximately 1,700,000 members in about 9000 churches. Locally, it would bring together 10 Congregational and four Evangelical and Reformed churches into a combined membership of about 6000.

Martin Asks Home Rule Start in '48

House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R. Mass.), said yesterday he wants to see Congress make a start this year at giving Washington home rule.

"I'm for it," said Speaker Martin in a press conference. He said he had voiced his interest to Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), chairman of the House District Home Rule Subcommittee. The committee is sponsoring a plan for having the District run by an elected city council and appointed manager, subject to veto control by Congress and the President.

Martin said he had not studied the Auchincloss program in detail. But he predicted that if the home rule bill is cleared by a substantial majority of the full House District Committee, it will be given "its day in court" on the House floor.

Martin said there may have to be compromises to get the home rule program through the House, but he added:

"I'd take what I could and next year come back for more."

Meanwhile, Auchincloss called an executive meeting of his subcommittee for 4 p. m. tomorrow to go over the draft of home rule legislation. This session will be followed by a joint meeting at 10 a. m. Thursday with the Senate Home Rule Subcommittee headed by Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.).

Normal, Sunny Day Forecast For District

Washingtonians will experience a sunny day today, although a few clouds will float past during the afternoon, the weatherman predicted last night.

Weebee

The temperature will be just about normal for this time of year, he said. Highest expected reading should be about 44 degrees during the afternoon, although the mercury should drop around the freezing mark after midnight.

Yesterday was a typical January 5 for the District, he said. The average high recording through the years has been 42 degrees, which was reached at 2:44 p. m. Thermometers dropped to the freezing level at 2:42 a. m. when 32 degrees were recorded.

Court Records Show Drop in Major Crimes

District Court records showed a drp of 500 indictments for major crimes in Washington last year from 1946.

A decrease of 913 legal disputes filed in the civil branch was also revealed in statistics prepared by District Court Assignment Commissioner John Henry Sullivan.

In 1946 there were 1976 indictments for major crimes and 6023 civil suits filed; last year the figures dropped to 1476 and 5210.

Study of the statistics showed that the courts are slowly catching up on the backlog of cases awaiting trial, although fewer were disposed of in 1947 than in the previous year. This was accomplished, court officials said, because the fewer current indictments resulted in fewer current cases to be tried, allowing time for reducing the volume of old cases.

Only 22 of the criminal cases awaiting trial now are over one year old. Of these, defendants were committeed to St. Elizabeths Hospital more than a year ago in 12 cases, two have been heard, but resulted in mistrials; defendants are fugitives in three, and two are awaiting dismissal.

As of the first of the year there were 1092 criminal cases actually calendared with 211 available for immediate trial. The majority of these cases are current, only 54 beeing more than six months old.

In civil courts, officials said that persons requesting jury trials now have only a 10-month waiting period for hearing, compared with 12 months a year ago. For non-jury cases the waiting period remains the same, 12 months, they said.

Speaker Martin Calls on Leaders In His District to Not Let Him Quit

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

House District Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) returned to work yesterday while House leaders launched a drive to have his home district draft him for another term in Congress.

Dirksen had left home with the announcement that he would not run again because of compelling personal reasons—eye trouble has dictated a complete rest.

But House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., (R., Mass.) announced he had already called leading citizens, including newspaper publishers, in Dirksen's district. Martn predicted a strong campaign will be made there to draft Dirksen for reelection, with the understanding he is to have the rest doctors have declared necessary.

Martin said, too, that House members will probably get up a letter to be sent to Dirksen's district urging his reelection.

Dirksen himself, as he reached his office at the Capitol, gave scant signs of letting up his work in this session. He said he plans to continue as head of the House District Committee, and of the House Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee. He said he will call the District Committee together within a week to discuss unfinished business, and possible new action on these major District problems:

1. Revenue: "I fancy we'll have to take a look at the tax question again," said Dirksen, "including the question of a sales tax."

2. School construction: "Walt Horan probably called the turn when he said there ought to be more money for school facilities here," said Dirksen. He referred to the fight made by Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.), chairman of the House District Appropriation Subcommittee, for more school building funds earlier this year.

3. Teachers' salaries: "If living costs go up and stay, we may have to look again into the question of teachers' salaries," Dirksen said. "When teachers get one fourth the money for putting the foundation under a young life that bricklayers get for putting the foundation under a house, something has got to be done about it."

He pointed out, however, that Congress earlier this week had boosted District teachers' salaries.

4. School health: "That is being stressed in my home," said Dirksen, "an dit may require some attention here."

Dirksen said school construction problems could be covered by the investigator he plans to appoint to conduct the study he ordered as a result of the parent-student strik e at Browne Junior High School annexes. He said three or four names were under consideration for the job, and the assignment would be to go in and size up the school problem from all angles

Norfolk School Year-'Round Term Plan Weighed

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—A 12-month term for the elementary grades of Norfolk County schools is being considered by administrative and educational staffs of the schools, according to Superintendent W. A. Early.

All county school children through the eighth grade would attend classes the same number of days in the year as they do at present, but one fourth of the students would be on vacation at all times.

Early explained that under such a plan, three rooms would accommodate the same number of pupils as now require four rooms, thus alleviating the present over-crowded condition.

He added that the 12-month plan would be means of improvement in the general teaching level. He said that to employ teachers on 12-month basis would mean higher salaries and the consequent attraction of better qualified instructors.

The plan also would effect savings in insurance, maintenance, fuel costs, debt service, textbooks and transportation, Early said.

St. Paul's Forum Holds Discussion On World Crisis

The world crisis was discussed last night by diplomatic, educarum at St. Paul's Episcopal tional and other leaders at a fo-Church, Alexandria, Va.

Dr. Vladimir Gsovski, chief of foreign law at the Congressional Library, attacked the Soviet regime as having but one aim—military power.

Dr. Melquiades Gamboa, first secretary of the Philippine Embassy, stressed the need of a strong international law and a court of justice, and lauded the United Nations' efforts for world peace.

The urgency for teaching democracy to European children was emphasized by Miss Bess Goodykoontz of the United States Department of Education. Dr. Albert T. Mollegen, professor of Christian ethics at Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, was panel moderator. "Our Chances for World Peace" was the theme. Mrs. Carlos Campbell was program chairman.

Area News in Brief

Teetotaler Backs Beer License Plea

A prominent 81-year-old teetotaler yesterday appeared before an Alcoholic Beverage Control Board hearing to advocate granting of a beer and light wine license to a restaurant at 4469 Connecticut ave. nw.

Dr. George C. Havenner, 2912 Albermarle st. nw., past president of the Federation of Citizens Association, said he abstains himself but considers it a citizen's privilege to have a schooner of beer or dash of wine with his meal, if he pleases.

Sole protestant was Edward L. Springer, 2957 Upton st. nw. who objected to granting a Class D license because of the proximity of youth-packed Chavy Chase Ice Palace and because alcoholic beverages might attract "undesirable elements" to the area. Applicants are Peter and Monroe Robbins. The board took the case under advisement.

Court Cases Increase

The annual report of Judge James R. Duncan of Alexandria Civil and Police Court shows he and alternate Judge Harry F. Kennedy heard 13,204 cases last year. Of this figure, 11,404 were criminal cases and 1800 civil. In 1946, the judges heard 9989 cases.

Court receipts in 1947 totaled $113,784.14, as compared to $101,253.48 in 1946. The court had its biggest month financially last year in January, when it collected $13,879.19.

Guard Unit Planned

Douglas W. Stanton, jr., clerk of Alexandria's Civil and Police Court, yesterday announced plans for an Alexandria National Guard unit.

Stanton, a first lieutenant in the Guard, said he had been authorized to form a gun battery of the 710th Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion.

The unit, he said,will consist of three officers beside himself and 96 enlisted men. Recruiting will start as soon as he finds suitable headquarters, he said.

Fire Does $7000 Damage

A three-alarm fire yesterday caused $7000 damage in the basement of the house of Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward MacAdams, 3400 Laurel ave., Cheverly, Md.

The blaze was believed to have been started by a faulty oil furnace. The damage estimated included photographic equipment which MacAdams kept in the basement darkroom.

Companies from Cottage City, Bladensburg, Tuxedo - Cheverly, Mount Rainier, Seat Pleasant, Brentwood, and Riverdale Heights responded to the alarms. Mrs. MacAdams was at home at the time the fire started.

Former Guard Jailed

A former guard at the Bethesda Naval Hospital yesterday was sentenced to 30 days in jail for impersonating an officer. The charge resulted when he attempted to "arrest" a former lieutenant in the Maryland State Police.

The former hospital guard was listed as Deedie A. Boatwright, 47, of Frederick, Md. James R. Miller, formerly of the Maryland State Police and now a Rockville attorney, testified in Bethesda Police Court yesterday Boatwright, wearing his guard's badge, stopped him December 5 on Rockville pike and "threatened to run me in."

Great Dane Missing

Whoever "dognapped" Barry, black and white Great Dane, has a food problem on his hands, Howard J. Porter, 901 Burns st. se., said yesterday.

Barry consumes 5 pounds of meat daily, his owner explained. About 32 inches off the ground and weighing 160 pounds, Barry was last seen by his owner at 10 a. m. Saturday. He is valued at $1000.

Shooting Charge Dropped

A shooting charge against a Bailey's Crossroads farmer was dismissed yesterday in Fairfax Police Court on request of the man he allegedly shot.

Joseph L. Burrage, 32-year-old Pentagon policeman, dropped the charge against Mack Jones, 44, "to start the new year off right," he said.

Quick-Thinking Vetera Saves Md. Farmer

La Plata, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—Wilmer Howdyshell, former Forty-fifth Division infantryman, said his "Army training" was responsible for his saving a 48-year-old farmer from serious harm.

The former GI turned a panicky team of mules and saved Marton Williams from being run over with a heavily loaded wagon after Williams' foot became entangled in the chain trace. Williams escaped with cuts on the head inflicted by the mules' hooves.

"I was only a GI," Howdyshell said later, "but the Army taught me about thinks like that."

Woman Gets 3 Years For Six Burglaries

Baltimore, Jan. 5 (AP).—Mrs. Florence Todd, 21, of Norfolk, Va., was sentenced to up to three years in the Maryland Reformatory for Women today after she admitted in Criminal Court she obtained more than $2000 worth of jewelry by burglarizing six Baltimore homes.

Mrs. Todd, who also used the name of Bleimberger, told Judge Sherbow she took part in the burglaries with a male companion still being sought by police. The woman was arrested after she and her friend were surprised by a former policeman as they were robbing his home.

Gaming Trial Date Set In 16 St. Mary's Cases

Chief Judge Charles W. Woodward of Montgomery County Circuit Court yesterday set January 28 as the tentative date for trial of 15 gambling cases transferred to his court from St. Marys County.

The cases grew out of slot machine operations in St. Marys County, which legalized the coin machines in a county referendum December 9. There has been speculation that the cases might be dropped in view of the referendum.

MacArthur Held Receptive To GOP Call

Madison, Wis., Jan. 5 (AP).—Douglas MacArthur, General of the Army and supreme commander for the Allied powers in Japan, definitely has indicated, that he would be receptive to the Republican nomination for president of the United States, a prominent supporter said today.

Wisconsin Secretary of State Fred Zimmerman said that a message from the general, expressed the belief that "there can be no grater satisfaction than such as comes from the confidences reflected in the selection by one's neighbors for public service—no more challenging responsibility than lies in the fulfillment of their trust."

"I am sure," Zimmerman said, "the general meant he would perform any public service he was called upon by the people to render—whether it be as president or in the army. We who are supporting the general are positive that the general means that he regards any public service a responsibility he would have to fulfill."

Centennial Message

General MacArthur, who maintains his voting residence in Wisconsin, made his statement n a message of congratulatons on the opening of the State's centennial celebration.

"As I reflect upon the events in this century of effort and progress," he stated, "I am pr... deed that my own life is deeply rooted in Wisconsin's past, for I have trod those some Wisconsin paths which my father and my grandfather once trod, and take great pride in the knowledge that my opportunity for service to country found its origin in Wisconsin's selection and appointment, as did my fathers and grandfathers before me.

No Greater Satisfaction

"For in the labyrinth of destiny's pattern, there can be no greater satisfaction than such as comes from the confidence reflected in the selection by one's neighbors for public service—no more challenging responsibility than lies in the fulfillment of their trust."

Zimmerman and former Gov. Philip F. LaFollette, who served as colonel on General MacArthur's staff during the war, were included at a meeting yesterday which decided to enter a s... o Arthur-pledged delegates in the State's presidential preference primary next April.

LaFollette declined comment on today's message.

Blood Donor Unit Opened By Red Cross

The District Red Cross yesterday launched its greatest peacetime blood donor project.

A new blood center was opened in four inviting rooms on the ground floor of headquarters, 1730 E st. nw. The organization announced all healthy residents are invited to give blood so that the life-saving plasma will be available for transfusions when needed.

Starting of the District chapter's blood center is part of an attempt to establish a cross-country network of blood centers to supply blood and blood derivatives.

Thirty thousand pints a year are needed in metropolitan Washington alone.

First donor at the new center, which is open from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m., was Donna Jean Kemper, 21-year-old proofreader for the identification division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Her name was chosen by lot.

Among the 45 who gave blood yesterday were 13 Catholic friars from Capuchin College. Frank J. Pelka, 49, assistant supervisor of outside printing for the Government Printing Office, gave his thirteenth pint.

6000 May Attend

Farm Bureau Parley Opens Today in Md.

Baltimore, Jan. 5 (AP). — Thousands of Maryland's farming folk who were cheered by another good growing year in 1947, will gather tomorrow in Baltimore to review their accomplishments and to hear leading agricultural speakers.

The occasion is the thirty-second annual meeting of the State Farm Bureau. Preliminary estimates on attendance place the figure as high as 6000 farmers and their families.

Opening activities, the Farm Bureau wool pool members will meet tomorrow to discuss details of the organization. The session is scheduled to start at 2 p. m.

The three-day convention proper will begin Wednesday, and 10 component groups of the bureau and Maryland Agricultural Society are scheduled for separate sessions at two hotels—the Lord Baltimore and Southern.

Farm Bureau day will be observed throughout Wednesday at the general conventon session which will be called to order by President H. S. Leaverton.

Allen D. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and Mrs. Raymond Sayre, president of the Associated Women of the World, will appear on the afternoon program. Kline is president of the Iowa Farm Bureau.

An eitire section of a hotel mezzanine floor has been taken over for a poultry show, with chicken coops set up and booths erected for egg displays. Separate classes have been set up, including 4-H and FFA exhibits.

Presentation of Farm Bureau awards will be made Thursday night at the annual Farm Bureau banquet. Governor Lane will speak.

Edward Hall, Jr.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—Anne Arundel County Surveyor Edward Hall, jr., died of a heart attack yesterday. He is survived by his widow, Margaret A. S. Hall; two daughters, Elizabeth B. and Margaret D. Hall, and two sons, Edward Hall 3d and Lieut. F. Houghton S. Hall of the Navy. Mr. Hall served as surveyor for 26 years.

Mrs. Harrison Dead, Widow Of President

Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, 89, widow of the twenty-third President, died yesterday in New York after an illness of several weeks.

Mrs. Harrison

Although she never occupied the White House as First Lady, she was hostess there for two years during the prolonged illness of the first Mrs. Harrison, the former Caroline Lavinia Scott, her aunt, who died in 1892.

She married Mr. Harrison in New York in 1896, three years after his term had expired. They had one child, now Mrs. James Blaine Walker.

Death was attributed to asthma.

Widows of four Presidents are still living. They are Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Harrison was born Mary Scott Lord in Honesdale, Pa. Her father, Russell F. Lord, was general member of the Delaware & Hudson Canal Co. Her first husband, Walter Dimmick, one-time attorney general of Pennsylvania, died in 1882.

She had lived for the last 30 years in semi-retirement in New York.

Services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York, and at 2 p. m. Thursday, in Christ Church, Indianapolis, Ind., where she and Mr. Harrison lived until his death in 1901. Interment will be in Crown Hill Cemetery there.

Survivors, in addition to her daughter and son-in-law, are two grandchildren, Benjamin Harrison Walker and Jane Harrison Walker.

Funeral Rites Held For Weddell and Wife

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—Funeral services were held here today for former United States Ambassador Alexander Weddell, his wife and Mrs. Weddel's maid, all victims of the New Year's Day train crash in Missouri that claimed 14 lives.

Private burial services for the three were held in Hollywood Cemetery here after the services at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The Weddells and Miss Violet Mary Andrews were en route to Tucson, Ariz., for a winter vacation when the train cracked up near Otterville, Mo.

Mrs. Lena Lockwood

Funeral services for Mrs. Lena Lockwood, 78, church worker, will be held today at 3:30 p. m. at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw.

Dr. C. W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will conduct the services. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Lockwood died Sunday at her home, 5521 Colorado ave. nw., after an illness of several months. A native of Wilmington, N. C., she had lived here since her youth. She was the wife of the late Philo J. Lockwood, attorney and banker.

Active in Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., for 50 years, Mrs. Lockwood took a particular interest in Sunday school work and was superintendent of the Cradle Roll department for 20 years.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Helen Lockwood Smith, a member of the faculty of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, and Mrs. Vesta Lockwood Watson, 3719 Cumberland st. nw.; and a son, Carl J. Lockwood, San Francisco.

William U. Beam

Baltimore, Jan. 5 (AP).—William U. Beam, who spent more than 50 years making harnesses for Maryland thoroughbred trainers, but never bet on a race, died yesterday at the age of 83.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt, prewar president of Pimlico, and Frank Bonsal were among Beam's customers. He was one of the few remaining craftsmen of handmade harness in this part of the country.

Robert G. Wilkinson

Church Road, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—Funeral services for Robert Garland Wilkinson, 42, funeral director and merchant here, will be held in Prospect Christian Church cemetery tomorrow at 4 p. m.

Mrs. Randolph Dies; Lincoln Descendant

Mrs. Jessie Lincoln Randolph, 72, granddaughter of Abraham Lincoln, died Sunday in a Bennington, Vt., hospital.

Mrs. Randolph, the daughter of the late Robert Todd Lincoln, had been living for about two years at a summer estate, Hildene, at Manchester, Vt. The family home is at 3908 N st. nw.

She was born in Chicago and spent part of her childhood in Washington while her father was Secretary of War from 1881 to 1885. Later she lived in London, when he was minister to Great Britain, 1889 to 1893.

In recent years Mrs. Randolph had lived quietly in Washington, but in 1940 was one of the first District residents to join the movement supporting the presidential candidacy of the late Wendell Willkie.

Mrs. Randolph was married three times, with her first marriage ending in divorce.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a son, Robert Lincoln Bookwith, Chevy Chase; a daughter, Miss Mary Lincoln Beckwith, who was living with her in Manchester, and a nephew, Lincoln Isham, New York City.

Funeral services will be held in Manchester at 2 p. m tomorrow. The body will be placed in a vault until the place of interment is decided. Her parents are buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mrs. Lee Dies At 60 After Long Illness

Mrs. Florence K. Lee, 60, wife of Ernest C. Lee, co-owner and manager of the Lee Funeral Home, died yesterday in Doctors' Hospital after an extended illness.

A native of New York City, she came to Washington as a child and has lived here since. She was known for her work on behalf of crippled children both here and throughout the country.

An active member of the Order of the Eastern Star, she was a past matron of Washington Centennial Chapter, No. 26, and also was past queen of Samla Temple, No. 51, Daughters of the Nile, and past supreme queen of all temples in the United States. While serving as supreme queen in 1937 she visited crippled children in Shrine hospitals throughout the country.

Mrs. Lee is survived, in addition to her husband, who lives at 2809 Chesterfield pl. nw., by a son, J. William Lee, Silver Spring, who is associated in business with his father; a daughter, Mrs. Marian Lee Buchanan, Washington; three sisters, Mrs. Ida Mae Vipond, Mrs. Oliver E. Foulk and Mrs. George J. Schoeneman, all of Silver Spring, and two brothers, Albert Rouse, Silver Spring, and Charles P. Rouse, Washington.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. at the Lee funeral home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne. Interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Congress to Reject Rationing, Martha Taft Tells League

By Genevieve Reynolds

SILVERY-TONGUED Mrs. Robert A. Taft, wife of the Senate Republican policy leader, yesterday predicted that Congress would reject President Truman's request for revival of rationing powers, "except in exceptional cases."

"I doubt very much that we will return to rationing," she declared in an address before members of the D. C. League of Republican Women.

Expressing a belief that OPA was necessary and "worked" during the war, she said that is undesirable as a peacetime system. "OPA is not a panacea for inflation," she asserted. "Price and rationing control would stifle initiative, discourage production, create shortages and increase inflation. Furthermore, return of the OPA would cause black markets to spring up again."

She said that reduction of taxes would be a better means of halting inflation. "Reduced taxes would permit people to have more money without raising wages," she explained.

Called Labor Champion

While able Martha Taft made no outright support plea for the candidacy of her husband for the Republican presidential nomination, she did depict him as the champion of labor and disclosed that the Senator's grandchildren call him "GOP" instead of Grandpa. She termed the legislation opposed by President Truman at the time of the railroad strike last spring" restrictive labor legislation."

"That was a real slave labor bill," she insisted. "It would have given as much power over labor as in Russia. It pased the House, but failed to come up before the Senate under unanimouse consent because Bob Taft objected. So it makes you wonder a little bit who is the friend of labor."

The wife of the presidential candidate from Ohio said that the Taft-Hartley labor bill is becoming more popular now that people are beginning to understan dit.

Mrs. Taft also discussed the Marhall Plan, taxes, social legislatoin and other issues in her talk. She alerted the GOP women on forthcoming congressional bills, telling them to watch out for the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill to socialize medicine. "We must be careful that it doesn't slip in as a great humonitarian measure," she said, dubbed it a "nice old log-rolling bill."

Taft Quips

"The torch of liberty is like a husband or a furnace; if you don't do something about it, it will go out," she noted in her address. She observed that Senator Taft "has a lot more seniority on Senate committees than he's entitled to. I say as his wife he's not as old as all that."

Mrs. Taft maintained that the Republicans could be proud of their record in the first session of the Eightieth Congress." Then she added that some people remarked that the session lasted seven months, while it took only seven days to make the world.

"But," she queried, "have you looked at the old thing lately?"

Preceding the program, Mrs. Joseph Farrington, league president, announced that the organization's recent fashion show, held in the Mayflower Hotel, netted $5000 profit for the league.

Tea Honors Red Cross Workers

Personnel of several foreign Red Cross societies were honored at tea yesterday afternoon at Red Cross headquarters. There were representatives from Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Denmark and Colombia.

The Yugoslavian representative, Mme. Militca Dedier, is here on a six-month United Nations' scholarship. Referred to the American Red Cross by the U. S. Children's Bureau, it was she who was responsible for the restoration of the war-damaged American Home for Underprivileged Children of Yugoslav. In her country, she said, 1,200,000 children are cared for by the Yugoslavian Red Cross.

Although Mme. Dedier could not speak a word of English when she arrived here two months ago, she now speaks very well—and she gives the credit to her teachers.

Commodore Kai Hammerich, formerly a captain in the Danish Navy and now president of the Danish Red Cross, was accompanied by the Danish Counselor and Mme. Bertelsen. During the war, the Commodore was a leader in the resistance movement. His sons stayed in Sweden and he and his wife in Denmark, and between then they shuttled people back and forth across the waters. The longest he and wife could stay in any one place was 44 hours.

The other guests, Miss Marie Bernatzikova, from Czechoslovakia, and Miss Leanor Camacho from Colombia, have come to stduy Red Cross nursing activities.

Miss Amparo Pablo, a visitor from the Philippines, was also at the tea. She is here to study public welfare programs, as the greatest need in the Philippines, she said, is social and economic rehabilitation.

Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson, volunteer in charge of hospitality arrangements for visiting foreign officials, received the guests. Those who assisted were Mrs. Helen Bowe, Mrs. Elizabeth Lindemann and Miss Gertrude Calhoun. The tea table was spread with yellow cloth and centered with bunches of bittersweet, and small cakes iced in yellow were served with the tea.

"ONE LUMP OR TWO?" asks Mrs. Jouett Shouse, president of the Potomac Boxer Club, as she serves a cup of tea to Mrs. Robert T. Chaplin, a member of the Jango advertising committee, at the party held for the committee yesterday in Mrs. Kenneth Royall's apartment at the Mayflower. Mrs. Claude Mickelwait, center, assistant chairman of the committee, was among those who gathered to discuss program and advertising plans for the Second National Boxer Show on January 30

On the Party Calendar

UNDERSECRETARY of State Robert A. Lovett entertained at a luncheon at Blair House yesterday at 1 p. m. in honor of the Foreign Minister of Ecuador, Dr. Antonio Parra Velasco.

The Ambassador of Ecuador, Augusto Dillon, was a guest, and Carlos Julio Arosemena, Counselor at the Embassy of Ecuador. Also, Jose Antonio Correa of the Foreign Office of Ecuador, the Ambassador of Chile, Felix Nieto del Rio; the Ambassador of Colombia, Don Gonzalo Restepo-Jaramillo, and the Ambassador of Venezuela, Gonzalo Carnevali.

Others included Senator Elbert Thomas, Representative Bartel J. Jonkman, Capt. Colon Elroy Alfaro, representative of Ecuador to the Pan American Union and former Ambassador of Ecuador to the United States; Sheldon Mills and Paul Daniels of the State Department, Maj. Gen. Otto Weyland, USAF; Rear Admiral Edmund Wooldrige, USN, and George Owen of the State Department.

Biddles Hosts At Dinner Party

MR. AND MRS. FRANCIS BIDDLE were hosts last night at a dinner party given at their home in Georgetown honoring Mrs. Alan Kirk, wife of the United States Ambassador to Belgium, who has been visiting here during the holiday season.

Guests included the Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, the French Attache and Mme. Henri Claudel, Mrs. Andre Visson, Alexis Leger and Ralph Page.

Jango Committee Entertained at Tea

Members of the advertising committee of the Junior Army-Navy Guild Organization were entertained at tea yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel apartment of Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall, wife of the Secretary of the Army. In the absence of Mrs. Royall, who is on a trip to California, Mrs. Ben Dixon and Miss Klaire Adkins acted as hostesses.

Under the guidance of Mrs. E. A. Evans, chairman, and Mrs. Claude Mickelwait, assistant chairman, members of the committee have just closed a successful drive for advertising to appear in the catalogue of the second National Boxer Show of the Potomac Boxer Club to be held January 30 at Fort Myer. Mrs. Royall is one of the sponsors of the show, proceeds from which will help finance the volunteer work of Jangos in hospitals and servicemen's clubs.

Mrs. E. C. B. Danforth, jr., chairman of the show committee, presided at a brief business meeting preceding the tea.

Mrs. Vogel Entertains at Shower for Miss Nina Lunn

PRETTY Miss Nina Lunn drew scores of presents yesterday from a silver chest. Her marriage to Nathaniel Luttrell will take place on Thursday, and yesterday Mrs. Martin Vogel entertained for her at a shower. While guests gathered round, Miss Lunn opened gifts, placed in a chest in the center of the room.

Tea and coffee were served from a table centered with white flowers and white wedding cake. About 100 friends of the bride-elect dropped by the home of Mrs. Vogel between the hours of 4 and 6.

Among the guests were Mrs. Clayton Adams and Mrs. Hartley McConchie, nieces of the hostess, Mme. Eriksson, wife of the Swedish Ambassador, Mme. Jutila, wife of the Finnish Minister, Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, Mme. Economou-Gouras, wife of the Greek Counselor, Senora de Vallarino and Miss Hilda Vallarino, Mrs. Harold H. . . . New Year's bride

Naval Gun Factory in Washington. He attended George Washington University, the College of the City of New York and New York Law School.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a dressmaker suit of pink and navy with a matching hat and navy accessories. She carried a white Bible with white orchids.

On return from their wedding trip the couple will reside in Meurilee Arms apartments in Bladensburg, Md.

Rechter—Forsyth

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Marshall Forsyth of Arlington, Va., have announced the marriage of their daughter, Anne Randolph, to Joseph J. Rechter of New York. The ceremony took place December 27 in New York with members of the immediate famlies present.

The bride, a descendant of Chief Justice John Marshall and Col. Richard Kidder Meade, Revolutionary staff officer with General Washington, comes from a long line of colonial families of Virginia and Maryland including the Washington, Fairfax, Lee, Warner and Randolph families.

The bridegroom, who resigned recently as an officer in Army Air Forces, previously attended New York University. He and his bride will reside in New York following their wedding trip.

De Castro—Richards

Col. and Mrs. Robert Baker Richards of Bethesda, Md., announce the marriage of their daughter, Joan Larrabee, to Esteban Fernandez de Castro of Bayamo, Oriente, Cuba, on September 20, 1947, in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart in Washington.

The former Miss Richards attended Sidwell Friends School and University of Wisconsin where she was a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority. The bridegroom was graduated from the University of Havana and later took graduate work at Columbia University. He has been attached to the Cuban Embassy in Washington for the past two years.

Henri's Red Pants Pleasing In Gallery's New Van Dyck; Student Exchange Fostered

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THE NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART'S newest acquisition ups their collection of Van Dyck's to 14. It is a full-length painting of Henri II of Lorraine and the Duc de Guise, both elegantly gotten up with Henri's red pants especially pleasing.

The portrait is a gift of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, the Assistant Secretary for Air, and for many years it hung in the Fifth Avenue residence of his parents, the Harry Payne Whitneys. Both Mr. and Mrs. Whitney, accompanied by the Gallery's Director and Mrs. David Finley, despite holiday fatigue, spent most of Sunday afternoon looking at the pictures.

U. S. Branch of Blatchford's

COL. DOUGLAS PARMENTIER, who did such a good wartime job handling a section of the Army's press relations, is heading the soon-to-be-opened New York branch of Blatchford's, the British publishers.

The famous publishers, whose home office is on London's North Audley st., have taken over a house on East 55th st., let Larry White, architect son of famous Architect Stanford White, have his dignified way with it. They are shipping over a huge consignment of rare and new books to fill the shelves.

Douglas, incidentally, used to be president of Harper's Publishing Co. A year ago last August he married Washington's Mrs. Nordell Lloyd, whose first husband was one of the main stockholders of the Christian Science Monitor. Katherine Lloyd sold her very grand house on R st., and, to her friends' disappointment, moved with Douglas to New York.

For World Betterment

AN EFFECTIVE way to promote international peace and understanding between peoples is exchanging students. One of the newest undertakings along this international line has been launched by the American Field Service, the ambulance corps which served with such distinction in both world wars. New York's Stephen Galati, the founder, has kept his wartime organization activated, turned a group of his volunteer ambulance drivers into directors, set up the American Field Service International Scholarships. All in all, some 3000 Field Service veterans, most of whom served overseas, are helping because they believe an educational exchange the best means for furthering their ideas.

During 1946-1947, their initial year, they arranged 10 scholarships. In 1947-1948 they have upped the number to 55, 50 Europeans and Asiatics studying here, 5 Americans journeying abroad.

The program will cost only some $80,000 because several colleges are cooperating by furnishing "gifts in kind"—for instance, providing board and lodging—while the AFSIS meets the tuition fee. An additional feature is a hospitality program which tends to details such as greeting arriving students, maintaining a personal shopping service. It is run by volunteers who, on the side, show their charges the American way. The students who, so far, have ranged from 15 to 35 years old, have come from eight countries, are screened carefully. Only those interested in bettering world conditions rather than their own personal education have been chosen. And, incidentally, a Washington committee has been formed recently, with John Mackey as president and Stuart Kaiser as secretary.

Princess Goes Ahead With Plans

BEFORE PRINCESS EMINA TOUSSOUN announced her engagement to Cornelius Gibson Bretsch, she asked King Farouk's permission. Egypt's King, who is the princess' double cousin, emphatically refused his consent. His Majesty's attitude so enraged Emina's brother that he immediately renounced his princely title. But the princess, quite unperturbed, is proceeding with plans for her marriage to the former naval officer.

Princess Emina met "Connie" during the war when he was stationed in Cairo. She came to Washington over a year ago and recently moved into a charming house on P st.

Of Turkish origin, she is a daughter of the late Prince Omar Toussoun, archeologist, connoisseur of fine arts, one of Egypt's "great men." Hospitable, exceedingly generous, the princess, following family tradition, kept open house in wartime Cairo, entertained a great deal for both Americans and British. She married, later divorced, Egypt's Prince Halim. Connie Bretsch, who hails from Raleigh, N. C., left the Navy some time ago and is now with the Federal Housing Administration.

Glamour for Blood Donors

QUITE THE MOST elegant new decor around town is the suite of rooms the Red Cross has fixed up for blood donors. Almost half the first floor of the New York ave. headquarters has been remodeled. There's a reception room with dove gray paneling, red and gold leather chairs, magazines, newspapers galore. The "donating" rooms are typically hospital. There's a recovery room for anyone feeling a twinge of faintness, a trim canteen, staffed by volunteers, who serve coffee, ham sandwiches, cakes to the donors at small chromium tables.

It is really glamorous—and it ought to be, for when the center gets into full swing, the Red Cross expects to receive and process some 500 pints of blood each week in their efficient new laboratory.

Yesterday's "gala" opening featured a speech by charming Joseph Grew, our former Ambassador to Japan, and the presence of members of the cast of "Carousel," the musical comedy currently showing at the National.

Women Leaders Honor Suffragist

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

IN A CEREMONY sponsored by the D. C. Branch, National Woman's Party, tribute was paid yesterday afternoon to the famed pioneer suffragist, Lucretia Mott, on the occasion of her 155th birthday. Representatives of numerous women's organizations attended the program, held in the crypt of the Capitol and laid wreaths at the base of the monument honoring Lucretia Mott, Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton. Above, Mrs. Robert W. Macauley, second from left, assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee, pays her tribute to the trail blazers of women's rights. Looking on are, left to right, Miss Anita Pollitzer, chairman, National Woman's Party; Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic National Committee Woman from Pennsylvania, who presided; Senator Arthur Capper stanch supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment, and Mrs. Mabel Van Dyke Baer, chairman, D. C. Branch, National Woman's Party. A tea at Alva Belmont House followed the ceremony, which was featured by a cappella singing by the Asbury Young People's Choir

D. C. Opera Guild To Have Meeting

The Washington Opera Guild will hold its monthly luncheon today at the United Nations Club at 1 p. m. Paul Chandler Hume, Milton Berliner, Mrs. Hazel Markel and other prominent newspaper and radio authorities will be present. Several singers from the casts of the Puccini operas which the guild will present on January 28 and 29 will present a musical program. Harry Slattery will act as toastmaster.

Alexandria Hadassah To Meet Wednesday

The Jewish National Fund and the tree-planting program in Palestine will be discussed at the meeting of Alexandria Chapter of Hadassah at Beth El Temple tomorrow evening at 8:15. Mrs. Philip Gorman, cochairman, will describe the program of land reclamation, erosion control and reforestation being carried on in Palestine.

Miss Elaine Languman will tell of the Brandies Camp Institute and the Hadassah Youth Activities program. Mrs. Samuel Novak will report on progress of the Hadassah yearbook and will also present a skit, "How to Sell a Tough Customer."

Measure Marshall Plan Cost By Success, Kuhn Tells Club

EVEN if there were no communism drive on in western Europe, the Marshall Plan still would be needed. The United States couldn't afford to let France, Italy and her other friends starve or be knocked out by economic chaos. This was the belief expressed by Ferdinand Kuhn, jr., Washington Post reporter, in a luncheon address yesterday before members of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Warning that the Marshall Plan is one of the most complex issues facing the American people, he predicted a great cry on the question of cost when the congressional hearings start Friday.

Kuhn pointed out that the Marshall Plan is not a matter of sending food and fuel alone, but a recovery plan to help Europe get back on its own feet.

For a yardstick of cost, he suggested the measurement be "Will the Marshall Plan make Europe self-supporting?"

"It is irrelevant to say, 'cut the cost two or three billion,'" he declared. "Unless help is enough to get the wheels of Europe turning it will not be a recovery plan, but simply a continuation of giving food.

Aiding European recovery is a pioneering undertaking. It is the first time the United States has had a chance to work with European countries to help create a United Europe, according to Kuhn. "Don't try to make too many exaggerated claims for the Marshall Plan," he cautioned. "We can't know for certain that it will succeed. But with dedication and effort on both sides of the ocean it can work."

To the query, "How can we provide funds for what we need and at the same time help Europe?" Kuhn answered, "The Marshall Plan calls for only 3 percent of our National income. However, it is not a question of funds but of supplies."

Another poser put to Kuhn by a club member was, "Why is so little stress put on aid to the Far East?"

His answer was, "Shortly after Pearl Harbor the Administration decided to give priority to Europe. Again it isn't a question of just funds for China but also supplies. Later on something will have to be done for both China and Latin America. South America will get enormous help from the Marshall Plan by selling its products to the United States for relief to European countries."

Miss Duval, Miss Leslie, to Be Married

Duval—Gardner

Col. Henry H. Duval, USA, and Mrs. Duval of Parkfairfax, Alexandria, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Juanita Prescot, to Lieut. (j. g.) Robert Merril Gardner, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Gardner of Plainville, Mass.

Miss Duval attended Edgewood Park School, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., and is now attending George Washington University.

Leslie—Hahn

Mrs. John Ronald Leslie of Washington and Grove Beach, Clinton, Conn., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Ann Curtis Leslie, to Philip LeRoy Hahn, jr., of Middletown, Conn. The wedding will take place in June.

Miss Leslie was graduated from the Northfield School for Girls, East Northfield, Mass., and is in her junior year at Connecticut College for Women. She is a direct descendent of Governor Winthrop, first Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and a lateral descendent of Daniel Webster.

Her fiance served three years in the Army Air Forces.

Veit—Satterthwaite

Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Veit of Silver Spring, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Nancy Helen, to William Bryan Satterthwaite, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Satterthwaite of Washington.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Dunn—Kellogg

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Franklin Dunn of Falls Church, Va., formerly of Wytheville, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Betsy Jane, to John Reginald Kellogg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Kellogg.

Miss Dunn will be graduated in June from Radford College. Mr. Kellogg was graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and is now with Monsanto Chemical Co. in Norfolk, Va.

The wedding will be in the early summer.

Holdredges Return

Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege have returned from their holiday visit with their daughter, Mrs. Alexander Robert Lawton 3d and Mr. Lawton in Atlanta, Ga.

En route back to the Capital, Mr. and Mrs. Holdrege were guests of Mrs. John Drexel of Southern Pines, N. C.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Loses Sleep Fretting Because Her Best Beau Hasn't Given Her a Diamond Encrusted Watch He Found on the Street

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in a quandary and will be very grateful for your advice. There is a young man who is madly in love with me and I am afraid the feeling is mutual.

He is a clever and brilliant student, now a senior in college; and in the matter of dates and gifts he is of necessity frugal, because he has to manage on a student's budget. I take a realistic view of the situation and have no fault to find on that score.

However, the following matter has been keeping me awake nights: A few weeks ago, while we were walking, John found a lady's diamond encrusted watch. He placed an advertisement in the newspapers and waited for the owner to put in a claim; but so far, none has been made.

He Evades Her Covetous Hints

NOW my girl friends think it's disgraceful that he hasn't given the watch to me. When I finally got up nerve enough to ask him what had become of it, he passively replied that no claim had been made and that the watch is in his bureau drawer. Then he changed the subject.

If his love for me is really sincere, don't you think I should get the watch? I am looking forward to your opinion, for then I'm sure I'll know what to do; so an early reply will be appreciated. E. F.

Girl's Theories Are Indefensible

DEAR E. F.: Your line of reasoning is in the worst of taste, and so is your vexed preoccupation with consuming desire to get possession of the watch.

I doubt that your girl friends initiated the whispering campaign that John ought to give it to you. More likely you've been busy drumming up sotto voce comment to that effect.

Here is my slant: If you were invested with sound sentimental values, fastidious self-regard and some degree of sensitivity to others' feelings, the idea of John's proffering a "found" bauble in gift-guise or as a love-offering would never occur to you. And you would shrink with a sense of offense and disappointment in him, if he were to make such a gesture.

Man's Attitude Above Reproach

WHATEVER John's motives for passively ignoring your covetous designs and brassy hinting, on the record his attitude is eminently correct, not disgraceful.

And speaking of his motives, they may be quite as mercenary as yours. It may be his silent intent to sell the watch eventually for the best price he can get, if it isn't claimed, within a reasonable time, by the person who lost it. But if that's his purpose, it is entirely his business; and the fact that you happen to be his sweetheart doesn't give you a shred of claim to presumptive-right to it, in the form of a gift.

So, for advice: Get the watch off your mind. Don't lose any more sleep over it. And if you value John's respect and would have him think you love him for himself, don't badger him again with meanly speculative questions on the subject. M. H.

Baby's Rash May Be From Premature Diet

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is appalling to note how mothers, having accepted the fact that babies can be fed early in life, go way beyond reason and have them eating several foods at six weeks to two months of age.

The development of the baby has a great deal to do with his capacity to eat from a spoon. It is commonplace for the child to reject food from a spoon and urge it out with his tongue. This may be a temporary thing, but it is a matter of development and it might be wiser to stop food by spoon for a time and wait until the baby can take it without thrusting it outward when the spoon is put in his mouth. In a week or two or three this behavior may have been outgrown and along with it will be a greater digestive capacity to deal with foods other than milk.

Another indication that the baby may be still too young for solid foods is the way in which he breaks out with a fine rash on cheeks or forehead when they are included in the diet. This advertises that for the time, at least, this food is getting only partial digestion, some of the food elements being thrust into the blood stream undigested. It is very well, when this happens, to forgo the use of that food for a week or two or more and then try it again. There may be no such reaction to it.

The average age at which food can be handled by the baby without difficulty is three months. At this time the baby will be able to learn easily how to take food from the spoon and should not have any reaction to it.

That means, of course, that the food will be offered in very cautious amounts. Try just one spoonful of a new food. Offer just that one spoonful for a week, along with the rest of the diet, before increasing this amount. By that time the baby will have become accustomed to it and if there is any reaction the mother will stop the food and wait until later, before offering it again.

Just Eat Less

Magic Potions Won't Reduce Excess Weight

By Ida Jean Kain

When a woman finally faces the solid fact that she must either crack down on calories and resort to exercise or resign herself to being overweight the rest of her natural days, her first move is to investigate the magic methods. She figures that science has made such progress, surely it has found something that can turn the slim trick.

Well, ever since fat became unfashionable—and probably ever since Eve got too many calories in that apple—women have been trying to find a way to have their cake and eat it too, so to speak. The search started with the hazardous thyroid extract epidemic which became such a threat to health that now it can be purchased only by prescription. And even when the need for this glandular stimulant is indicated, in order to reduce weight a low-calorie diet is required. At long last all women realize that this powerful drug should be taken only in cases of subnormal metabolism and then under a doctor's strict supervision.

Now the hopeful inquiries center around some form of appetite and hunger depressant to make dieting easier. If a drug, by virtue of its depressive effect on appetite, could help you take off weight without any harmful results, I would be quick to suggest it—if only for the reason that excess weight is harmful to health. But doctors repeatedly warn against such a drug in the presence of contra-indications, including high blood pressure, heart conditions, nervous tensions, and allergies. It can produce fatigue, insomnia, anxiety, palpitation of heart, dizziness . . . to mention a few.

The only way to depress the appetite is to eat less and shrink the stomach. It may seem a roundabout way to dull appetite, but it is safe and sure.

Your Questions on Homemaking

I would like to know what you can use to take formula stains from baby clothes and blankets. M. H.

Formula stains are very difficult, if not impossible to remove from fabrics if they have been washed and ironed. However, you might try dusting them with powdered pepsin to soften the stains. Let the pepsin stand on the stain a half hour, brush it off, wash and rinse the spot well. Or, if the materials are white or color fast let the garments soak in a solution of water and household bleach before washing. Use one cup of household bleach to 10 quarts of water. Wash in soap suds and rinse three times.

Can you tell me how a blackened, greasy waffle iron may be cleaned? It is a "twin" waffle iron. It has been stored for several years, and was badly burned before it was stored. J. W.

Grease that is allowed to bake and set is very difficult to remove, but try this: Saturate a cloth or paper towel with household ammonia, place it between the waffle grids and allow to stand overnight. This should help to soften the deposit so that in the morning you can scour it off, using a very stiff brush. Dust the grids with washing soda or a good household cleaner before going to work with the brush. Of course, you must use care not to get moisture into the electric elements of the iron. Perhaps several applications of the ammonia, left over night, will be necessary to completely remove the deposit. When clean, the waffle iron must be given the same reseasoning treatment given a new iron. To do this, thoroughly brush the grids, when cold, with unsalted melted fat such as shortening or salad oil, connect the iron and heat to baking temperature, disconnect and allow to cool.

How can a new, ordinary mop be treated for use as a dust mop? K. P.

Soak new and clean string mop with a mixture of 2 parts paraffin oil and 1 part turpentine, with a little cedar oil added to give a pleasant odor. Wring, and hang outdoors to dry.

I have an old mirror that is blistered and scaled but in a very pretty frame. If I could get all the old silvering off without damaging the glass, I'd like to put a picture in the frame. How can this be done? E. H. M.

Silvering of a mirror can sometimes be removed by the careful use of a razor blade. By another method, the coating that protects the silvering is taken off with a paint remover (obtainable in paint stores). The mirror is then placed horizontally, covered with a layer of salt, and moistened with a mixture of 1 part water and 3 parts cider vinegar. The effect is to produce chlorine, which softens the silvering. After a number of hours, the silvering can usually be wiped off clean.

I have a problem. A hot pipe was placed on one of my leather-top tables and left a scorch mark about the size of a 50-cent piece. I wonder if you or any of your readers could tell me how to get rid of it? Any advice would be greatly appreciated. F. S. L.

It is difficult to remove scorch marks from leather because the heat actually changes the leather. However, you might make it less conspicuous by going over the entire table top with either white vaseline or neat's-foot oil. Rub in all that the leather will absorb, and remove the excess by wiping with a clean, soft cloth. Or, you could go over the table surface with a special leather cleaner and preserver which you will find on sale at leather goods stores. Follow directions which came with the preparation you buy.

Time and again, you have mentioned powdered pepsin in your column. I have tried two large chain drugstores. At the first store, one clerk asked another until they had made the rounds and finally decided I'd have to see the prescription clerk. At the next store they told me it was made for internal use and a very small bottle would cost $3 to $4. "I'll have to look up the price," sez they. And I didn't have them do so since I couldn't afford to deodorize my clothes at that price. Where do you get it and for how much? I. P.

One store which sells powdered pepsin is an old established drug store located in the 600 block of Pennsylvania ave. They tell me they have a powdered pepsin for cleaning use and sell it for 75 cents an ounce. For further information, call them at National 0143.

When we took down our awnings last fall, I noticed that they were quite faded, though otherwise in good condition. Looking forward to spring, I'm wondering if there is anything we can paint or otherwise recolor them with before we put them up again. H. H.

Awning cloth can be painted with house paint thinned with one fourth as much turpentine. Paint should be applied in a thin coat and brushed into the fibers. A thick coat on the surface will cause sticking. The paint should be thoroughly dry before the awning is folded. There are also special paints on the market which give excellent results on faded awning cloth.

Only the brick walls of the building at the corner of Third and Downey sts. in the eastern section of the town were left standing and none but a few pieces of the church furniture were saved.

Supreme Court Limits Police Search Power

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Seven Supreme Court justices yesterday put a limit on the power of the police to search and seize.

Officers cannot "frisk" a man, the judges said, just because he happens to be in a car with somebody suspected of crime.

Michael Di Re, a petty black market suspect from Buffalo, was freed from jail by the ruling.

While the ruling blocked this effort to stretch police authority, last year's Harris decision was left in force. In that case, the court split 5 to 4 in upholding a squad of FBI agents who put a man under arrest and then ransacked his home without a search warrant. They found evidence they could not have gotten a warrant for and sent him to jail for a crime they never suspected him of until they searched the place.

Gasoline Coupons Involved

The war was at its height on April 14, 1944, when the OPA in Buffalo got a tip from a stool-pigeon that he had a date to buy gasoline coupons from a man named Frank Buttitta. OPA agents and Buffalo police trailed Buttitta's car. When it stopped they found the "pigeon" sitting in the back seat with two 100-gallon gas coupons in his hand. He said he got the coupons from Buttitta.

With Buttitta in the front seat was Di Re. He had nothing in his hands, and the officers never had heard of him. But they put him "under arrest"—without saying what for—and searched him three times. In all, they found he had more than 100 forged coupons and he got a year in jail for having them.

Senior Judge Learned Hand of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals set the jail term aside. All our liberties are in danger, said Judge Hand, if people can be sent to jail on evidence found in such lawless searches.

Justice Jackson said for the Supreme Court majority yesterday that Judge Hand was right.

"We meet in this case, as in many," said Jackson, "the appeal to necessity. It is said that if such arrests and searches cannot be made, law enforcement will be more difficult and uncertain. But the forefathers, after consulting the lessons of history, designed our Constitution to place obstacles in the way of a too-permeating police surveilance, which they seemed to think was a greater danger to a free people than the escape of some criminals from punishment."

When this country was dry, it was settled that the police can stop a car and search it for contraband. Frederick Bernays Wiener, assistant to the attorney general, told the court it follows the police can search whatever—or whoever, like Di Re—may be in the car.

But Wiener admitted that a search warrant for a house would not give the police a right to search guests of the owner. Jackson said he supposed the Government would say the same if the search warrant was for the car. And the court was not going to hold, Jackson declared, that the police could go farther in searching a car without a warrant than they could with one.

However, that was just what the court majority did hold in the Harris case, when it was a home, rather than a car, that was searched.

Arrest Wasn't Lawful

Jackson said, also, that the court could not uphold the search of Di Re on the ground that he was under lawful arrest, because he wasn't.

Jackson spoke for Justices Frankfurter and Rutledge—who joined him in dissenting in the Harris case—and for Reed, Douglas and Burton—who agreed with that decision.

Chief Justice Vinson and Justice Black dissented from the decision on Di Re. They made up the rest of the Harris majority.

Besides ordering Di Re turned loose, the court yesterday:

Gave a Chicago liquor store a new trial of its suit for the $9000 it paid for 750 cases of tequila which were seized by the Government because there was ground glass in the bottles;

Va. Gas Tax Upheld

Turned down a North Carolina truck company which complained of the Virginia law charging the company five cents a gallon on all the gas its trucks used in Virginia, no matter where the gas was bought;

Refused to review a ruling of the Alabama Supreme Court, which threw out an injunction and a judgment for $15,000 damages won by a Birmingham cafe man against the AFL hotel workers union which picketed his cafe; and Refused to hear the Government's appeal from an order giving eight million dollars in processing taxes back to the California and Hawaiian Sugar Refining Corp.

Contempt Case

High Court Admits New Illinois Plea

The tangled Illinois legal system is up for another Supreme Court going over—this time in the case of a man who favored shooting, or hanging, a list of Illinois judges.

This was Harrison Parker, who yesterday was granted a hearing of his appeal from sentences to nine months in jail for contempt of court.

Parker said he was chancellor of the Puritan Church, of Lagrange, Ill. He told the court he was a Puritan of the first water, tracing his descent from Deacon Thomas Parker who helped set up the Puritan church in Massachusetts in 1642, and from Capt. John Parker, who fired the first shot at Concord in 1775. But this was not what got him into trouble.

How Trouble Began

Parks difficulties started when he filed a suit for slander against Jacob Shamberg, a Chicago prosecutor. Parker claimed Shamberg called him a blackmailer.

Shambg reped that Parker was a blackmailer, and asked the court to order Parker to let him see some Puritan church papers that Parker had.

Parker brought the papers into court and filed them with the clerk. Illinois Supreme Court called the papers impertinent, malicious and scandalous.

One paper was a Puritan resolution calling on President Roosevelt to use his war powers to set up a military court "to try Robert R. McCormick, Joseph Medill Patterson, Weymouth Kirkland, Judges Harry M. Fisher, Joseph Burke, John Prytalski, Hugo Friend, Joseph A. Sabath and Justices Wilson, Gunn and Stone of the Illinois Supreme Court."

The church resolution claimed these people had been depriving people of their civil liberties and said that "if found guilty they should be taken out either by soldiers or a posse of civilians and shot as a warning to other scoundrels that our Federal Government will not tolerate the violation or a State constitution and the 'railroad' to prison or jail of innocent ment by the order of crooked judges in the hire of this scoundrel, McCormick."

Russian Orthodox To Observe Christmas Eve

Celebration of the Russian Orthodox Christmas Eve and other events will mark the Feast of the Epiphany today.

Epiphany commemorates "the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles, and the coming of His light into a world of darkness," it was pointed out by Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G st. nw. Epiphany Church, which will hold a "Feast of Lights" today at 8 p. m., was founded on Epiphany Day, 1842.

Members of St. Nicholas' Russian Orthodox Church, 1772 Church st. nw., will hold a Yule service today at 7 p. m., and a liturgy tomorrow at 11 a. m.—Christmas Day according to the Julian Calendar. In the absense of the Rev. Paul Lutov, pastor, who is visiting Europe, the services will be conducted by the Rev. John Scotty.

The Greek Orthodox churches once celebrated Christmas on Epiphany Day, too, but now mark Christmas on the same date as the Western church. However, the Greeks still observe Easter by the Julian Calendar, as do the Russian Orthodox churches.

Washington Episcopal Diocesan youths will participate in a "Feast of Lights" service Sunday at 5:30 p. m. at St. Margaret's Church, Connecticut ave. and Bancroft pl. nw.

The gospel for the Feast of Epiphany will be read at Catholic masses today.

Truman Backing of Voluntary Credit Control Seen in Reaction to ABA Anti-Inflation Plan

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman said yesterday that he was "glad" to know about the voluntary anti-inflation program drawn up by the American Bankers Association.

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder indorsed the program heartily, saying it was "an aggressive voluntary step in the direction of controlling inflationary and speculative loans by banks."

Whether Mr. Truman's statement meant that he believed voluntary measures were enough at this time was an unanswered question so far as the White House was concerned. In banking circles, however, it was assumed that this was the case.

At Odds On Bank Credit

The question of bank credit recently brought about disagreement between Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, and Secretary Snyder. Their disagreement, in turn, has widened to the point where other advisers of Mr. Truman are on both sides of the question, some agreeing with Eccles and some with Snyder.

Eccles, testifying at the Capitol late in November, asked Congress to give the Federal Reserve Board power to demand of all commercial banks a temporary "special reserve" which would serve to limit credit expansion.

Secretary Snyder, appearing before another congressional committee on the same day, expressed opposition to the Eccles proposal.

If the interpreaion pu on President Truman's statement yesterday by bankers is the correct one, he has sided with Secretary Snyder in the matter.

The program of the American Bankers Association was discussed with Mr. Truman at the White House yesterday by the president of the association, Joseph M. Dodge, a Detroit banker. With Dodge was Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank and a former head of the ABA.

Points of Program

Apparently, Mr. Truman already was familiar with the program, which had been announced the night before. Its four chief points, which are to be brought home to the Nation's 15,000 banks in an intensive campaign, are as follows:

"That in the months immediately ahead, commodity and inventory loans which are designed to withhold essential goods from the normal market channels in anticipation of price rises should not be made.

"That mortgage loans for nonessential building or for construction which can be postponed until building supplies and labor are in greater abundance should be discouraged.

"That banks should give priority to loans to those borrowers who can turn out the supplies and services needed at home and abroad now, in order that the machinery for the production of essential goods may be kept functioning at maximum levels.

"That there should be a greatly intensified drive to sell Treasury Savings Bonds to the public and to promote other forms of savings, such as savings accounts in banks, as a means of absorbing some of the surplus money in the spending stream which would otherwise continue to compete for the goods and services in short supply."

President's Letter

President Truman, in a letter which he handed Mr. Dodge, said in part:

"I am glad to know of the program which you have undertaken in the American Bankers Association to combat any tendency on the part of bankers or borrowers to use bank credit unwisely, under present conditions.

"The proper use of bank credit is an important factor in restraining inflation and also in maintaining our present high volume of production. Bank credit must be available for sound productive purposes. But bankers and borrowers alike must be kept aware of the dangers arising from bank credit which is used merely to increase the demand for goods and not the supply, or for any form of speculation in new materials, in goods, in foods or in properties. The effect of this can easily become disastrous."

Secretary Snyder, after calling the program an aggressive voluntary step to control inflationary loans, said:

"It is certain that, with the cooperation of the bankers of the country, the program will succeed in obtaining positive beneficial results."

ITU Petition In Publisher Case Granted

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A National Labor Relations Board trial examiner yesterday ordered the general counsel of that agency and American newspaper publishers to file a bill of particulars in their case against the AFL International Typographical Union.

The ruling was made by examiner Arthur Leff, granting a large part of a union petition that the publishers and the NLRB spell out their charges. They claimed that the union violated the Taft-Hartley Act by trying to force publishers to accept a closed shop and to coerce their employes.

Leff's ruling cleared up the last of the legal technicalities which delayed a hearing on the publisher's case. It is set to begin tomorrow in Chicago. Leff ordered the general counsel's office to supply the data, or as much of it as possible, by that time.

Charges General

The publishers' complaint, being prosecuted by the NLRB general counsel's office, stated the charges in general terms. It said the ITU refused to bargain collectively and demanded contract clauses which would have forced employers to discriminate against those who worked for them.

Union attorney Gerhard Van Arkel asked that the publishers and the general counsel give names, dates and places of the alleged violations, and the language of the clauses which they said the union demanded.

Data to be Supplied

Leff's ruling granted this request. It ordered the general counsel's office to furnish:

1. The names of the newspaper-employers who allegedly were required by the ITU to "discriminate against employes by imposing conditions of employment" and giving the time and date when such offenses are alleged to have taken place.

2. The "general substance" of the contract clauses by which such discrimination is alleged to have been attempted.

3. Names of employers who allegedly were required to hire only foremen who were members of the ITU.

4. Particulars in claims that individual employes "are or may be entitled to any back pay award or other other remendial relief by reason of having been discriminated against"—by being denied a job or fired from one because he was not a member of the ITU.

5. Names of companies with whom the ITU or its subordinate unions refused to bargain collectively.

Another Motion Denied

Leff denied another motion of Van Arkel, however. This was that the complaint against the union be made "more definite and certain." The examiner said that as the complaint was filed, it was not "indefinite, uncertain or obscure."

Both of Van Arkel's motions were opposed by Elisha Hanson, attorney representing the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and Allen Sinsheimer, jr., representing the NLRB general counsel's office. They said the motions were "dilatory" and intended only to delay the proceedings.

4 D. C. Papers Offer Printers Raise of $8

A wage increase of $8 a week has been offered by the Washington Publishers Association to the Columbia Typographical Union, which represents printers on all four local newspapers.

The offer was announced yesterday in a release signed by Peyton R. Evans, executive secretary of the Washington Publishers Association, and James J. O'Connor, president of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101.

Since November 11 the printers have continued to work under terms of a contract which expired on that date. On December 21, the typographical union, which represents the 600-odd printers on the Washington newspapers, requested the parent International Typographical Union for authority to take a strike vote.

The announcement yesterday by Evans and O'Connor declared:

"Negotiations have resulted in an offer by the Washington Publishers Association of an increase in wage rates of $8 a week, or an increase of approximately 10 per cent, effective as of November 12, 1947. This is being recommended to the local union by the union committee."

The union will probably meet this Sunday and act on the offer.

Cumberland to Lease Airport to Firm

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—By a 3-to-2 vote, the mayor and council today accepted a recommendation of the municipal airport commission to lease the field to the Jenkins-Delagrange Corp. of Cumberland for two years.

The company will pay the city $3000 for the first year, and $3000 or 5 per cent of the gross, whichever is greater, for the second year.

Appeal for Delay Again Denied in Contempt Case

Ten Hollywood writers and directors cited for contempt of Congress yesterday again failed to win a delay in their mass arraignment, now scheduled for next Friday.

United States District Judge David A. Pine denied their appeal for a stay until the start of their individual trials. He said the circumstances in the case had not changed since December 15, when he turned down a similar plea. The defense motion was filed by Attorney Robert W. Kenny of California.

The 10 were indicted after they refused to tell the House Un-American Activities Committee whether they were Communists.

Kenny said later his clients probably would leave California for Washington last night. They are John Howard Lawson, Edward Dmytryk, Ring Lardner, jr., Adrian Scott, Albert Maltz, Dalton Trumbo, Samuel Ornitz, Herbert Biberman, Lester Cole and Alvah Bessie.

House Hearings Set On Petrillo Order

Chairman Hartley (R., N. J.) of the House Labor Committee yesterday ordered open hearings next Tuesday on "the bans issued and threatened to be issued" by the American Federation of Musicians.

He had told reporters earlier he will call James C. Petrillo, AFM president, some time during the hearings to explain the shutdown on musical recordings ordered by Petrillo to begin January 1.

Business Outlook

Banker Hits Sawdust Trail To Curb Inflationary Loans

By J. A. Livingston

ANY banker will subscribe to the lending principles just set forth by Joseph M. Dodge, president of the American Bankers Association. And most borrowers would go along too—with a "Bravo!"

So, superficially, it would seem that Dodge ought to have an easy time convincing United States bankers and businessmen that:

1. Loans to hold goods off the market—for speculation—ought not to be made.

2. Mortgage loans for nonessential or deferrable construction should be postponed until manpower and materials are in better supply.

Livingston

3. Priority should be given to borrowers who can turn out supplies quickly.

Dodge, who with other ABA officials is soon to hit the sawdust trail around the country selling these ideas in local communities, may discover that the principles are already in practice—or at least so bankers and businessmen assume.

No businessman, when he goes to his bank for a loan, is a speculator. Never would he dream of buying up supplies and holding them off the market. But he does have to have protection. He says to his banker: "You remember what happened last year, Bill. I was all set to manufacture my summer line, when my supplier of inner linings didn't make delivery. I couldn't move a machine. I'm not taking any chances this year. I want my goods in hand now. That's why I want the loan, Bill." Well, what does Bill say? Is that a speculative loan, designed to hold goods off the market? Or is it necessary?

THEN THERE'S the case of new construction. It takes starch for the banker to say: "Jim, your firm has done without a new garage so long, put it off a little longer." Jim might decide to pop across the street to another bank. What will the bank's board of directors say to that?

The banker must think of his customer, too, as well as himself. If he doesn't make an inventory loan to the ABC Knitgoods Co., ABC will lose business to the XYZ Knitgoods Co., which deals with a rival bank.

The banker is like everyone else in inflation—secure in his own limited knowledge. When a local manufacturer or wholesaler has a pile of unfilled orders, the banker sees tangible evidence of business ahead, of real demand. The banker, of course, doesn't know whether some of those orders are duplicates or quadruplicates placed with other firms; he doesn't know what the purchasers want the materials for—for stockpiling, or for resale at a speculative profit, or for ordinary business. All he knows is that business is booming, prices are rising, and it takes more money to operate. It's up to him to supply that money.

PRIOR TO the war, when a bank needed reserves to make a loan it could (a) borrow from the Federal Reserve System or (b) call a loan of another customer or sell a corporate security. In going into debt to the Federal, the bank was immediately under pressure; it could not lend freely. The Fed could say, gently, "Aren't you overextending?" In calling a loan or selling a corporate security, the bank simply substituted one loan for another. So, there was no net credit expansion.

Bankers are under little restraint today. In the last year, the Nation's 14,700 banks boosted loans from 35.6 billions to about 43 billions. Each banker was sure that each loan he made was for productive purposes. If he needed reserves, he simply sold Government bonds to the Federal Reserve System. To him, a 4 per cent loan to an active customer looked better than a 2 per cent or 2½ per cent investment in Government bonds.

This process, as Dodge is realistically aware, can go on indefinitely. As of November 30, banks still owned 80 billions of governments. And since the Federal Reserve continues to support Government bonds at par, banks can raise reserves to banks whenever they need them simply by calling up a Government bond broker and selling—"At the market."

Thus, Dodge's job is to convince bankers that they must place upon themselves the restraint the Federal Reserve System used to. The individual banker must look upon his customer not as a friend and a hard-working, conservative member of the local business community but as one of many Nationwide borrowers all seeking to compete in the open market for a limited supply of goods and services, all helping, by their bidding, to push up prices against one another.

DODGE MUST convince bankers that any loan, not offset by the cancellation of another loan, adds to the general money supply and hence to the inflationary spiral. For one obvious reason: The Nation's productive machine today is operating just about at capacity, so most loans increase demand without increasing production.

The ABA shows foresight in its program. If bankers don't exercise self-restraint, some far more drastic restraint ultimately will be imposed upon them. Congress will authorize an increase in reserve requirements, or Secretary of the Treasury Snyder might, as a last resort, let the Government bond market go down below par.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 5 (AP).—Grains recovered from an early sell-off to end with substantial gains on the Board of Trade today. Corn led the advance and soybeans spurted to a new record top in the usual "thin" market for this commodity.

Opening prices were lower and prices dropped several cents in fairly heavy trading. The market then made a slow recovery until about the last 15 minutes, when trading expanded sharply and prices went to the best levels of the day. The close was just about at the top.

Wheat finished 3½ to 4¼ higher, May 2.93@2.93½; corn was 2½ to 3 higher, May 2.56½@2.55¾; oats were 1½@1⅞ higher, May 1.19¾, and soybeans were 1 to 3½ higher, March 4.12½.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 60 cents a bale lower to 20 cents higher today in moderately active dealings. The pending Administration's messages to Congress, uncertainty over the Marshall Plan developments and a slow start in textile selling in the New Year tended to restrict trading interest.

Commission house profit-taking of a tax nature and selling inspired by temporary weakness in grains depressed prices more than $1.50 a bale in early dealings. Hedge selling was moderate. The market later turned about on mill buying and short covering which found offerings scarce.

New Records For American Building Assn.

By S. Oliver Goodman

Assets of the American Building Association reached a new all-time high of $26,500,000 at the end of 1947, a gain of 11 per cent for the year.

Blanz

In reporting this yesterday at the 74th annual meeting, Secretary Wilfred H. Blanz pointed out that resources of the institution have doubled in the past seven years. Loans and number of investing and borrowing members also are at new peaks, he said.

The institution, located at 300 Pennsylvania ave. se., has shown its most rapid growth in recent years as the following asset and loan figures attest:

	Assets.	Loans.
1948	$26,500,000	$25,455,000
1947	23,900,000	22,775,000
1946	22,300,000	18,592,000
1945	19,000,000	15,871,000
1944	17,300,000	15,569,000
1943	15,500,000	14,308,000
1942	14,900,000	14,197,000

At the end of 1947 the institution had 11,881 shareholders and 4991 borrowing members.

Shareholders reelected all officers and directors as follows: William C. Farmer, president; John E. Mergner, vice president; Blanz, secretary, and Howard B. Kramer, treasurer; directors: Albert W. Howard, Charles H. Kindle, Frederick A. Blumer, John J. Carmody, Charles A. Rossiter, W. Dudley Spicknall, S. Wilson Earnshaw, Bernard J. Coyle and the four officers.

NEW PARTNERS: The investment brokerage of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane, which has a branch in Washington, has admitted seven new partners. They are: William H. Culbertson, Winthrop C. Lenz, Kenneth W. Martin, Norman P. Smith and James E. Thomson, all of New York, general partners; Frank B. Cahn of Baltimore, and Mrs. Ruth B. Jones of New Orleans, special partners.

B. & O. OUTLOOK: The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will derive about 26 million dollars more in operating revenue in 1948 because of increases in rates granted

White

December 30 by the Interstate Commerce Commission, President Roy B. White predicted yesterday. Of that increase, 25 million would come from the 10 per cent increases in freight charges granted to all railroads. The remaining one million would be obtained from the 25 per cent increase granted in all rates.

Even with the increased revenue, White added, the B. & O. will show only a four per cent operating income on net investments after income tax reductions. The railroads asked the ICC for a six per cent return as a fair minimum.

APPOINTMENTS: Robert V. Fleming, president and chairman of the board of Riggs National Bank, has been reappointed as a member of the Federal Advisory Council of Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. W. G. Wysor of Richmond has been redesignated as chairman of the reserve bank; Charles P. McCormick of Baltimore as deputy chairman; James M. Shriver of Westminster, Md.; E. R. Ebert of Greenville, S. C.; W. Bladen Lowndes of Baltimore, and N. S. Calhoun of Greensboro, N. C., as directors.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Eugene S. Williams has been elected president and board chairman of the Western Maryland Railway, succeeding Charles W. Brown, retired. William C. Purnell succeeded Williams as general counsel . . . William McRobbie has been appointed assistant manager of the Washington office of Cunard White Star Line . . . C. H. Williams was appointed chief engineer of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., a subsidiary of United States Steel Corp. . . . William T. Brady and W. T. Gamble have been elected vice presidents of Corn Products Refining Co. . . . D. L. Thomson, division manager, announced the appointment of R. M. Hassell as branch manager of the new Sherwin Williams store at 1317 14th st. nw. The Government Contracts and Wholesale Office has been moved from the Munsey Building to the 14th st. address.

SALES SURGE: Safeway Stores, Inc., reported sales for four weeks ended December 27 of $94,467,879, an increase of 20.9 per cent over $78,104,365 for the like weeks of 1946. Sales for 52 weeks ended December 27 totaled $1,117,505,944, an increase of 32.3 per cent above $844,480,999 for the previous like period.

ODD LOTS: Steel operations this week were scheduled at a new postwar high of 97.9 per cent of capacity . . . National Broadcasting Co. plans to establish two new regional television networks centered in Chicago and Los Angeles . . . Sinclair Oil Co. announced it has borrowed 50 million dollars from an insurance company to complete its expansion and modernization program and to provide funds for future needs. . . . E. R. Squibb & Sons stockholders authorizcd the creation of 120,000 shares of a new preferred stock without par value to be known as serial preferred . . . New York Life Insurance Co. has purchased the land and buildings of the Reading, Pa., plant of the Container Co. under a financing plan that may approximate 10 million dollars . . . Earl Kremer will be installed as president of the Washington Passenger Association at a banquet meeting tomorrow night in the Mayflower.

Tallying Upper Marlboro's 'Record' Vote

Drug Question Snags Trial Of Bank Case

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—Judge Johnson J. Hayes today ordered William Reeves Gardner tried as key man in the Fredericksburg bank case, which got off to a false start when a physician pronounced Gardner too influenced by drugs competently to enter his plea to the court.

Judge Hayes overruled a broadside of motions from defense counsel in his efforts to speed the trial, but he struck a snag after a physician administered a shot of morphine to Gardner during the noon recess.

Previously, the judge had heard conflicting medical testimony as to whether a trial would help or hinder Gardner's high blood pressure and heart ailments. Immediately after the recess, he had ruled that Virginia's former chief bank examiner could and should stand trial.

Other Rulings In Case

Judge Hayes took pause at intervals during the first day of retrial—of Hugh N. Rakes and six other defendants—to overrule a motion which would have thrown out virtually all of the Government's tangible evidence, and to deny separate trials to six other codefendants.

The one remaining defendant, Harry Lamson of Washington, D. C., broker, entered a plea of nolo contendere. Like other principals, he is charged with aiding and abetting Gardner in the misapplication of nearly $500,000 from the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Fredericksburg.

Crux of Arguments

The crux of today's arguments before the Wilkesboro, N. C., Federal District judge had to do with whether the case might precipitate the death of Gardner, who was summoned to court from a State penitentiary where he is serving a seven-year term for embezzlement.

The human interest in the case came more to the fore late this afternoon, after the judge had ordered Gardner to stand trial and to enter his plea, and after a deputy clek had spent one hour count indictment to Gardner while and 18 minutes reading the 20-he slumped in his seat before an

Late in the afternoon, Dr. Henry armed prison guard.

W. Decker, the physician who administered the morphine at 12:40 p. m., told the court Gardner possibly was still under the drug's influence. It was then that the judge concluded the indictment would have to be read again tomorrow morning.

"And I don't want any doctor administering morphine to him (Gardner) in the morning without consulting me—unless it's absolute ly necessary," the judge said.

Appeal Is Sought In Juror Tampering

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 5 (AP).—An attorney for Leslie Earl Martin, 30-year-old Richmond, Va., service station attendant, today sought to have the Fourth United States Circuit Court of Appeals set aside Martin's conviction on charges of tampering with a juror. years in a Federal reformatory

Martin was sentenced to three last December 17.

The juror involved helped convict nine prominent defendants in connection with alleged misapplication of nearly $500,000 from the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Fredericksburg, Va.

Martin was represented by Thomas H. Stone, while United States District Attorney George R. Humrickhouse opposed the appeal.

Luray Company To Test All Telephones

Luray, Va., Jan. 5.—The Luray-Rattleburg Telephone Co., a cooperative group, has decided to test all telephones in its area. Officers elected at the meeting Saturday, were E. K. Miller, president; Lloyd Huffman, vice president; Harper Griffith, manager; L. W. Judd, Floyd Fox, Charles A. Sours, Harper Griffith, Cecil Griffith and M. C. Griffith, directors.

New Record Set in Upper Marlboro Vote

A record turn-out of 108 voters was registered in yesterday's biennial election of town commissioners for Upper Malboro, county seat of Prince Georges County, Md.

Three members, none of whom were candidates, were elected in the write-in vote. New member of the board is Thomas Van Claggett, jr., 37, whose father was a town commissioner for nearly 30 years.

Van Claggett replaces G. Gardner Shugart, superintendent of schools and president of the board, who had stated his other duties made it difficult to carry the town commissioner's work.

Two of the incumbents, Charles L. Wood, 48, commissioner for the past two years, and William T. Davis, 71, member of the commission for 15 years, were reelected. Neither Davis nor Wood sought the post.

The Maryland community has not had a candidate for public office since 1904. Voters merely write in the names of their choices on the blank ballots Yesterday's record vote surpassed the previous high by more than 20 votes.

After votes were counted, retiring Member Shugart presented Van Clagett with a copy of public local laws of Maryland relating to Prince Georges County. The volume was compiled by Judge T. Van Clagett and Marion Duckett in 1912 and presented to Shugart when he took office five years ago.

Election judges were Montgomery Morrow, Wilbur Jones and Richard Sothoron.

Woman Named Sheriff in West Virginia

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 5 (AP). Miss Carrie Lee Gardner Strider, 37-year-old brunette, was named sheriff today of 147-year-old Jefferson County.

Miss Strider, a niece of Bishop R. E. L. Strider of the Wheeling Episcopal Diocese, succeeded Sheriff Garland H. Moore, who died last week.

The new sheriff, who first became a deputy in April, 1937, had served as Moore's chief deputy. She will complete Moore's unexpired term which has until next January 1 to run.

Announcement of the appointment was made by Matt Garrett, who was elected to his ninth term as president of the Jefferson County Commissioners. The new sheriff said:

"I only hope we do not have a crime wave in Jefferson County, now that we have a woman sheriff."

She will take office as soon as she can qualify and post bond, probably this week.

Tax Income Forms Sent to Marylanders

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—State income tax forms are being sent to Marylanders by the income tax division of the comptroller's office daily.

Comptroller James J. Lacy said today over 100,000 income tax forms had been mailed to persons who paid taxes on incomes over $5000 last year.

The shorter income tax forms for persons earning less than that amount, for corporations and other income tax groups are being mailed as rapidly as possible.

The first payment on 1947 income is due April 15.

Special Md. Apple Tax Yields $2081

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—Comptroller James J. Lacy reported today apple growers had paid $2,081.23 into a special tax fund to promote consumption and improvement of the fruit.

The tax of 1 cent per bushel on apples grown in Maryland and sold in "commercial channels" is levied under an act passed by the 1947 Legislature.

One half of the tax is due December 31 and the rest not later than May 31.

Western Md. R. R. Employes Honor Retiring Chief

Baltimore, Jan. 5 (AP).—Approximately 500 employes of the Western Maryland Railroad attended a board of directors dinner tonight paying tribute to retiring President Charles W. Brown and officially welcoming the railroad's new president, Eugene S. Williams.

Brown retires after serving as head of the railroad for almost 14 years. Williams becomes the second legal officer to be promoted to the presidency. The late George P. Bagby made the same step in 1933.

Lake of Reeds Believed 'Sea' Moses Crossed

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—New evidence has been found showing that Moses and the Israelites probably crossed the Lake of Reeds, instead of the Red Sea, in their flight from Egypt to the Promised Land, Wendel Philips, leader of the University of California expedition, said today.

Philips said the common belief that the fleeing tribes crossed the Red Sea apparently had been disproved by members of the expedition, working under William B. Terry. Terry now is exploring the Sinai Peninsula, which is across the Gulf of Suez from Egypt.

Not Modern Red Sea

"It is now certain that the Sea or Lake of Reeds, which the Israelites are said to have crossed, wasn't the modern Red Sea at all, but a more northerly body of water, probably the Lake of Reeds mentioned in Egyptian documents from the time of the Exodus.

"The Biblical Sea or Lake of Reeds has generally been identified with the Red Sea, to which the name later was extended. Many scholars believed the north end of the Red Sea was much farther north in Biblical times than it is today, in which case the Israelities might have crossed it by following the itinerary given in the Book of Exodus.

Small Fort Discovered

"This view has now been conclusively disproved by an expedition of the eminent archeologist Prof. W. R. Albright of Johns Hopkins University who has just discovered with Dr. Henry Field, former curator of the Field Museum of Chicago, a small ancient fort on the shore line near Abu Zeneina, south of Suez.

"Archeological remains were found here by the expedition which show this settlement was occupied about 1500 B. C. By that time the shore line was already about the same as it is today, so it cannot have been any higher at the time of Exodus two centuries later."

He said the oldest inscriptions of any ancestral form of Semitic European alphabets have been found in some newly-discovered Egyptian copper mines at Serabit el Khadim.

Bureau to Speed Reservations

Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 5 (Spl.).—A central reservation bureau to speed making of train reservations has been announced by officials of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway.

Under the new system, all reservations will be handled by a switchboard here. Passengers wishing space will be connected directly with the central bureau, where switchboard operators will have complete diagrams of the accommodations available.

Rent Control Meeting Set at Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—For more than an hour today the Cumberland city council heard arguments for and against the local rent control in the event that Federal regulations are allowed to expire February 29.

It was finally agreed to call a joint meeting of the council, the county commissioners, the rent advisory committee and representatives of labor and real estate to discuss the problem.

Control. Landlords oppose the proposal with James B. Reinhart, president of the Cumberland Real Estate Board, declaring: "It is a matter of principle. No compromise with controls is possible."

Md. Fish Stake Rule Delayed Until March

Baltimore, Jan. 5 (AP).—The Army Engineers' decision on whether to allow Virginia fishermen to extend stake nets into the lower Chesapeake Bay will not be forthcoming until March, Col. William W. Wanamaker, district engineer of the Baltimore area, said today.

He said his Chesapeake Bay Fish Stake Board is drawing up recommendations on the request after a month's study of the problem. These recommendations will be forwarded to the North Atlantic Division engineer and then to the War Department before a decision is announced.

Colonel Wanamaker's staff and the Washington and Norfolk District engineers held open hearings last summer on the net extension proposals.

Frostburg Man Identifies Army Store What-Is-It

Frostburg, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—A Frostburg chiropractor says he has identified the $45 worth of what-is-it on sale at an Army surplus store in Dallas, Tex.

The Texas storekeeper, Chester Klingman, said even the manufacturers, to whom he wrote, had been unable to tell him what the electrical device was for. They had simply made it according to an Army plan and asked no questions.

The Army Medical Corps, which had paid $900 for the device and later sold it to Klingman, had also been unable to tell him what it was. So he based his price on the value of an electric motor and generator contained in the apparatus.

But Dr. Adam Baer, who saw a newspaper picture of the gadget, says he has one just like it. He uses it in the treatment of neuritis and calls it a polysine generator.

And the purchase price? Twenty-five dollars, second-hand, 12 years ago.

Hanover, Fauquier Records Approved By State Auditor

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5 (AP).—State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett today approved the accounts and records of Hanover and Fauquier Counties for the 1946-47 fiscal year, and noted in reports to Governor Tuck that the former came out in the black and the latter in the red for the fiscal period.

Both counties, however, ended the fiscal year with the lowest net debts and the highest property values of recent years.

Hanover took in $524,380 during the 1946-47 year, the auditor said, and spent $510,905.

Fauquier County, which came in $37,000 in the black in the 1945-46 fiscal year, exceeded its income of $550,480 by $33,779, in 1946-47, the auditor said. The county ended the fiscal period with a balance of $171,743 in all funds.

Lectures at Academy

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 5 (AP).—E. R. Swint of the Glenn L. Martin Co. and Dr. James P. Baxter, 3d, president of Williams College, will be special lecturers this week at the Naval Academy postgraduate school.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

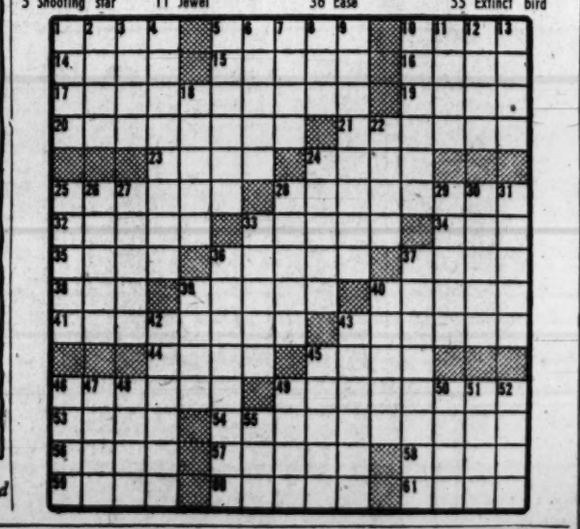
Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle



BARNABY

The government sprayed oil on the woods and the Pixies, but—
Yes! An outrage!
My eloquence will win the Security Council's support for us Pixies, m'boy. The national escutcheon of old Sylvania will be cleansed!
But the oil is almost all worn off, Mr. O'Malley—
Yes, I must hurry! . . . I'll arrange to speak tomorrow! . . .
I think tomorrow will be a good day to take Barnaby to the United Nations . . .
Is anything very special coming up?

Jack Armstrong Fan Requests Escape Details

Stuart Newman of 4604 Addison rd. ne. not only delivers The Washington Post, but also reads it very carefully. He asks:

"I'd like to know how O'Bannion in the Jack Armstrong comic strip gets out of the handcuffs he had on last Sunday and Monday. When he went off the cliff he did not have them on."

I'm afraid I can't help you, Stuart, because I haven't been following Jack Armstrong very closely lately.

However, your question will give me a wonderful chance to check up on an 11-year-old relative of mine, who contends he reads this column—but has never convinced me of it.

But he reads Jack Armstrong with the concentration of a broker reading his stock ticker. Maybe he can help.

ANONYMOUS TOKENS

An unsigned communication in my morning mail yields several streetcar tokens and the message:

"I hope your distaste for anonymous letters does not extend to anonymous tokens for Children's Hospital."

Right. But it's much nicer to know from whom they come, so that we can say thanks to:

Mrs. Kate Kundin, 60 V st. nw.; Helen Berry, Cheverly Manor, Md.; the folks at 3028 Newark st. nw.; Mrs. P. L. Silver, 1233 N. Courthouse rd., Arlington, Va.; the Gilbertsons, 3830 S. 6th st., Arlington, Va.; Mrs. Robert F. Wilbert, 1201 Trenton pl. se.

E. C. Pharr, 5704 N. 8th rd., Arlington, Va.; Blanche Brust; David Lloyd Kreeger, 1415 K st. nw.; Marguerite Sullivan and Gerry Kirby, 2723 Woodley pl. nw.; Mrs. T. C. Harris, 1362 Oak st. nw.; Alice Bromley, 1255 Wisconsin ave. nw., and an anonymous donor (who included cash) from Buffalo, N. Y.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. John P. Croke, 6408 Georgia st., Chevy Chase, Md.: We run Give-Away items whenever they're available, but I'm afraid it wouldn't be feasible to put a reverse twist on them and start a matrimonial bureau for lonely ducks. "Mickey" will have to find a girl-friend some other way.

COINCIDENCE DEPT.

For the past four years, Max King Steinberg of 3019 Douglas st. ne. has been trying to locate an old classmate of his, Carl P. Green. Max and Carl went to school together up in Doylestown, Pa.

The other morning Max was eating breakfast and listening to the radio. When a children's program came on, he decided that he was too lazy (and too engrossed in his breakfast) to get up to turn it off.

He's glad he didn't. A fellow named Carl Green was running the show, and as soon as the program was over a telephone call established the fact that it was the friend for whom Max had been searching for four years.

PIED TYPE DEPT.

Nicholas Gear of 1206 10th st. nw. submits a recent classified ad as evidence that prices have gotten completely out of hand:

"Corrugated, galvanized iron garbage can with cover, absolutely new. $500. Sligo xxxx."

A Chicago scientist recently delivered a lecture on the subject of the origin of the meteorites which frequently strike the earth.

He said that millions of years ago an earth-like planet exploded, and Marjorie Beck of Garrett Park, Md., notes that her favorite newspaper referred to this historic occasion as "a cosmetic catastrophe."

This is obviously the wrong phrase to describe the make-up of meteorites—but a wonderful phrase to describe the make-up worn by some women.

RUSSIA IN THE RED

Bob Morrow suggests that the best headline for the recent Russian monetary devaluation story would be:

Ruble Reduced to Rubble.

ADD SIGNS

Mrs. Newton C. Wing of 4528 Fairfield dr., Bethesda, Md., reports that her neighborhood theater recently advertised:

"Free Parking Body and Soul."

Floyd C. Crews of 1514 17th st. nw. recalls this depression-born sign which he saw in Texas during the early '30s:

"This store does absolutely no business on Sundays—and darn little on other days."

Floyd's sign reminds me of what I consider the best wisecrack of those gloomy years. Storekeepers used to quip:

"Business is looking up. It has to—it's flat on its back."

NEW Scientific Discoveries Used in Hair Experts' Exclusive Treatments

Help You To

GROW THICKER HAIR

(Hopeless Cases Not Accepted)

h. .i. FARRELL, Trichologist

Hair Experts' Scientific Plan Allied with Nature's Functions!

Upon Nature's inmate system of growth is based Hair Experts' specialized system . . . a plan that results in thicker hair NATURALLY grown and nurtured to full strength and virility with the aid of modern scientific formulae. First, the scalp is thoroughly and professionally cleansed of its dandruff or other disorders through special, gentle, but effective germicides which penetrate below the skin surface to kill the source of the infection and then reopen clogged passages.

Then when the basic cause of the scalp trouble is routed, Hair Experts begin the rejuvenating treatments that start to show actual results within weeks.

Special Exclusive Laboratory Created Formulae Used ONLY by Hair Experts!

After energizing the papilla to action, and then creating a fertile "field" for that growth, Hair Experts' special formulae (scientifically created by and for them, stimulate the sub-scalp hair growth to normal, natural length, strength and thickness. Then sluggish blood circulation is normalized to flood the hair follicles with life-giving "food" for hair growth.

Delay Is Deadly! Fatal Follicle Shrinkage May Negate Any Treatments!

Once your hair begins to show these symptoms: excessive hair in the combings; weak, short hair; excessive dandruff; itchiness, etc., you can be sure that a scalp disorder is already well under way. Follicle shrinkage is fatal!

Once it has set in, your chance for thicker hair is practically negligible! Come in IMMEDIATELY for a free, private scalp examination. Relax under our pleasant, professional treatments and care, and enjoy THICKER HAIR within a few months.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Eileen Howell, the film actress-model, told Macoco at El Morocco that she had a date with John Talbot. Macoco warned her that the resultant publicity would displease her—that she'd merely be mentioned as one who followed Lana Turner in Talbot's affections. Miss Howell disagreed, and made a wager on it with Macoco: They will analyze the publicity. If Macoco is right, Miss Howell will march up Fifth Ave. at 5 p. m. in a white bathing suit. And if he's wrong, Macoco will parade, same time, same place, in pajamas . . .

A rich former ambassador and a famous plane builder will be named among the big speculators in grain . . .

Beatrice Lillie moved to a hotel from her East End ave. apartment because she has no telephone there.

A New York lawyer was consulted by a man who held a $40,000 judgment against a producer. "If you want to get any money from him, you'll have to examine him in supplementary proceedings," the lawyer advised. "Start by asking him what he did with the $80,000 he won in a poker game. Ask him what he did with the $75,000 he borrowed from a show backer. Also ask what happened to the $120,000 he got in that realty deal. Then, nonchalantly, ask him what time it is" . . . "And then?" the man asked the lawyer . . . "Then he'll pull out his watch to tell you the time," the lawyer advised. "And when he does, grab the watch."

France Puncet, the Yugoslav Davis Cup player, was jailed in Belgrade for 42 days and lost almost 50 pounds. He suddenly was released to participate in an international tennis tourney in Egypt. Puncet made the trip to Cairo, but won't go home, insisting that he'll never go back while the present regime is in power.

Lena Horne, back from her Paris and London triumphs, resumes her picture making at MGM January 17.

When an actress, dining at Fefe Ferry's home, complained that there wasn't enough chicken in her chicken salad, the agent told her: "You should have as many good speaking lines in your next movie as there are pieces of chicken in this salad."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

War Risks in Greece and Trieste

By Drew Pearson

Trieste (by wireless).—If war comes during the year 1948, there are just two places where the explosion could occur. One is Greece, where a United States military mission is now face to face with Moscow's puppet Greek republic. The second is Trieste, where 5000 United States troops of the Eighty-eighth Division are separated by only a thin, vague line from the roughest, toughest Yugoslav fighters Tito can muster.

Tito

Of these two trouble spots, Trieste is by far the more dangerous. For, just opposite the scarcely charted border between Yugoslavia and the free city of Trieste are 100,000 Yugoslav troops equipped with the latest arms Moscow can manufacture. They could wade through the handful of 5000 United States troops—good as they are—in short order.

The great danger here is that Moscow might be successful in establishing a puppet Soviet government in northern Italy, many of whose cities already have Communist-dominated municipal councils. In this case the Soviet puppet in northern Italy would "immediately invite" Tito to send his army into that area.

Many diplomats who read the uncensored cables in Rome expect Moscow to move in this direction before next spring. One factor which appears to back them up is a secret military report just prepared by United States Central Intelligence showing that all Yugoslav troops opposite Trieste have been carefully selected for offensive combat, not mere guard duty.

The report lists in considerable detail the offensive units stationed opposite Trieste, including the "proletariat division" commanded by Col. Gajo Vojvodich, which is made up of the 1st Serbian Proletariat Brigade, the 3d Krajiska Proletariat Brigade, the 13th Croatian Proletariat Brigade and an artillery brigade. Also in the Trieste army are the 7th Banjska Offensive Division under Colonel Gruber, the 26th Dalmatian Offensive Division under Col. Rade Ilich, the 27th Slavonian Shock Division under Col. Radojica Nenezich and the 23d Krajiska Shock Division under Colonel Lizulj, plus the 1st Tank Division under Colonel Stupar. In addition to these 100,000 men just across the border from Trieste, Yugoslavia is permitted 5000 men as guards inside the free territory of Trieste.

These men have the most modern arms and equipment, all of Soviet make and fully motorized. They represent the best material which the Soviet Tito General Staff has at its disposal. All the men are members of the Communist Party and formerly belonged to the 1st Proletariat Division.

Note—Despite the size and nature of the Yugoslav army, though, hard-hitting Gen. Clarence Moore, commander of the 88th Division, has a far better trained, better equipped and tougher bunch of men. In fact, the 88th rates as one of the best divisions in the Army. They are only 5000 men, however, against 100,000.

Hard-Working Caffery

Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and his wife were being entertained in Paris on their recent visit to Europe by hard-working United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery. To meet the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Caffery had invited Foreign Minister Bidault, who sat on Mrs. Caffery's right. On the other side of Bidault sat Mrs. Bridges.

During the dinner Mrs. Bridges asked the Foreign Minister why it was that the French people did not realize how much food the United States was sending to France.

"It's because the Ambassador doesn't go down to meet the American food ships when they come in," replied Bidault, in French. Mrs. Caffery, who was acting as interpreter, conscientiously translated Bidault's reply, even though it was critical of her husband. Whereupon Mrs. Bridges shot back: "If the Ambassador met all the American food ships unloading in France he would be so busy he would have no time for anything else."

Note—This dinner occurred before the Friendship Train. Ambassador Caffery not only met the Friend Ship when it arrived at Le Havre but worked out reception arrangements with French officials so that the French people would be sure to know the full story of the Friendship Train. Nine other French Friendship Trains of smaller size are now being run to different cities of France.

Merry-Go-Round

Editorials praising the Friendship Train are still coming in from the French press. Here are some from Marseilles, the most Communist city of France and where the Russians staged their triumphant wheat parade last year . . . Le Soir: "The train was a modest one when it left Los Angeles but it accumulated all sorts of gifts en route as a result of fervent American friendship. Who sent these gifts? It was through the devotion and sincere brotherhood of all the American people, who sent the gifts themselves without official pomp. The French understand the symbol of collective action by American people and will not forget its profound significance."

Le Provencial, with the largest circulation in Marseilles: "It is not a question of official aid but a friendly gesture of the American people. Our friends in America do not forget us. We do not forget them, either. Twice in 30 years they have come to offer their blood to help us regain our liberty. Today they are thinking of our children. Without flowery language and big words, Marseilles says to them from the bottom of its heart, 'Thanks, friends.'"

Living in the Past

Some people never seem to know . . . That when the past is gone . . . There is no way to wake it up . . . And have it carry on . . . That what is gone is over now . . . And never will return . . . No matter what they try to do . . . Or how their hearts may yearn . . . They live their lives amid the dreams . . . Of all that used to be . . . And lock the door to progress with . . . The key of memory . . . They think there is no happiness . . . To match what they have had . . . And nothing now can comfort them . . . Or make them really glad . . . And all the while they step upon . . . The flowers on the ground . . . And look through eyes that never see . . . The sunshine all around.
